U. S. GOVERNMENT IS PROBING SINKING OF AN AMERICAN VESSEL

No Representations Will Be Made to Germany Over Loss of Gulflight Until Details of Sinking Are Known

THREE OF CREW ARE SAID TO HAVE DIED

German Submarine Is Reported to Have Torpedoed American Oil Steamer Off Scilly Islands

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—President Wilson will reserve judgment on the torpedoing of the American steamship Gulflight until full official details are received. The president inquired about the incident when he arrived from Williamstown, Mass., today, but was told that so far as White House officials knew no official word had come.

On the face of news dispatches officials admit that the attack on the ship is a serious matter, but they intend first a very thorough investigation shall be made and that no hasty action shall be made.

Secretary Bryan said a thorough inquiry would be made but that before official reports were received, the Washington government would make no comment.

Should another day pass without information from American officials abroad they probably will be instructed to get in touch with the remote localities where the Gulflight and her crew were taken.

In official circles it was thought that the inquiry probably would disclose the fact that the attack on the American vessel was an accident and not deliberate. In that event, it was considered likely that no action would be taken by the American government beyond a demand for damages.

The United States some time ago, in a note to Germany in reply to the German proclamation of a war zone around the British isles and Ireland said that it would hold Germany "to a strict accountability" for loss of American lives or vessels.

The inquiry which will be made through American diplomatic channels, will be directed with a view to ascertaining the manner of the torpedoing of the Gulflight and to fixing the responsibility. It is believed that several days will be required to complete the investigation.

Count Bernstorff, the German ambassador, said he had received no information other than the news dispatches and in the absence of any word from Berlin he declined to comment.

The first official report of the torpedoing of the Gulflight reached the state department today in an undated dispatch from Consul Stephens at Plymouth, England, saying the attack was made Saturday, but the vessel still was afloat and that patrol boats were attempting to tow her to the Scilly Islands.

Consul Stephens' telegram follows:

"American tank steamer Gulflight torpedoed off Scilly islands first instant. Captain died heart failure, body. Two of crew drowned, thirty-five saved. Vessel afloat, patrol boats attempting tow her into Scilly."

One of the Many Southerners Aboard Gulflight Is Killed

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—The two Americans in addition to Captain Gunter, who met their lives when the American steamer Gulflight was torpedoed off the Scilly islands were Walter Short, of Chicago, the wireless operator, and Eugene Chapanetta, of Port Arthur, Texas, according to a wireless telegram received here today by the Gulf Refining company, owner of the vessel.

The message, a brief one, was signed by First Officer Ralph Smith. It said Captain Gunter, whose home was in Pensacola, Fla., died of heart disease, and that Short and Chapanetta were lost. Texas were the only men, it is believed, reported yesterday to have jumped from the vessel after she was struck and who were lost because of fog that prevailed.

Short was taken aboard the Gulflight at New Orleans April 27, and Chapanetta the first trip aboard the vessel, Chapanetta shipped at Port Arthur. Including her officers and crew, the Gulflight had thirty-eight men aboard, most of them hailing from Gulf of Mexico ports. Ship and cargo, according to James Kennedy, marine superintendent of the company, were valued at $1,000,000.

Mr. Kennedy said he was awaiting full particulars of the attack on the Gulflight before communication with the state department. He thought it probable that the concluding damages for the lives lost, undoubtedly would be filed with the state department.

The Gulflight's cargo, Mr. Kennedy said, consisted of gasoline and oil in bulk and in cases.

It was declared to firms doing business in France and not to the French government that the Gulflight was owned by Captain Gunter was fifty-two years old. Early in the year he took a cotton ship into Bremen aboard the Gulflight. In January of last year he was in command of the steamer Oklahoma, which ran on a reef in a gale off the New Jersey coast and was rescued with seven of his crew by the steamer Bavaria.

German Submarines Sink Two Neutral Vessels

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 3.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen says the Swedish steamer Elida, timber laden, from Helsingborg for Hull, has been torpedoed and sunk in the North sea by a German submarine. She went to the bottom in less than three minutes.

The sixteen men and two women on board the vessel barely had time to make their escape in one of the small boats. After cruising about for two hours they were picked up by a Danish schooner and landed at Lemvig, Denmark.

The American oil tank steamer Gulflight, which sailed from Port Arthur,

Italy's Plunge Into War Is Looked for At an Early Date

Advices Reaching Washington Clearly Indicate Preparations to Take Definite Action Within Few Days

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Advices reaching the United States government through official and unofficial channels within the last few days indicate that Italy's preparations clearly tend to her participation in the war at an early date.

Aside from her extensive military preparations, and orders for war supplies the expected public appearance of King Victor Emmanuel at the Garibaldi celebration in Rome Wednesday is regarded there as of much significance, and demonstrations then in favor of war would not be surprising. Heretofore all such popular outbursts have been given no official sanction and have at times been repressed.

American diplomatists in Europe, some of whom are in touch with the Italian situation, believe Italy's decision now is only a matter of days and arrangements already are being made to accommodate Italian interests should the emergency arise.

If Italy should enter the war, it is understood she would ask the American embassies in Vienna, Berlin and Constantinople to care for her diplomatic interests. Italy now is the custodian in the Turkish capital of Russian interests, and Ambassador Morgenthau probably would have Petrograd's, subjects and interests to care for.

The recent call to Rome of the Italian ambassadors accredited to Great Britain, France, Germany and Austria is taken to foreshadow Italy's final decision. Diplomatists here would not be surprised if the envoys to Germany and Austria did not return to their posts.

DENIES ENGLISH PEOPLE NOW DRINK MORE BOOZE

Labor Leader Declares Lloyd George Is Mistaken in His Recent Statement

LONDON, May 3.—Will Crooks, labor leader in the house of commons, declares in a newspaper interview that there is less drinking in England than before the war and that Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George was mistaken in the statements he made regarding the subject.

Crooks asserts that if less work is being done at private ship yards some source other than drink must be sought and that this accusation has been spread broadcast by employers to cover up their own shortcomings. In his interview he says:

"I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that the Woolwich arsenal could turn out a third more work than it is doing now and that the output of efficient work is no greater because of lack of organization. Moreover, although the war has lasted nine months, no accommodation huts have been provided for the men to get their meals."

THOMAS C. MILLER TO SUCCEED T. H. JEFFRIES

Marcellus M. Anderson Will Be Elected Clerk of the Municipal Court

Thomas C. Miller was sworn in as chief deputy clerk of the Fulton courts Monday.

Mr. Miller takes the place made vacant by the resignation of T. H. Jeffries, recently elected ordinary.

Mr. Miller was clerk of the municipal court. The judges of that court will meet Monday afternoon to elect his successor, who will be Marcellus M. Anderson.

Mr. Anderson is confined to his home by illness, and Deputy Clerk J. R. McClelland will assume clerk of the municipal court until his successor's.

Mr. Jeffries will not actively assume the duties of ordinary until his commission is issued by the governor during the latter part of this week, and Clerk of Courts Arnold Broyles is still acting as ordinary.

FLORENCE CARMAN FACES CHARGE OF MURDER IN MINOLA

State Alleges She Was Unseen Slayer of Mrs. Louise Bailey on June 30, of Last Year

CRIME COMMITTED IN OFFICE OF DR. CARMAN

Selection o fJury for Second Trial Proceeds Slowly--First Jury Failed to Reach Verdict

(By Associated Press.)

MINEOLA, N. Y., May 3.—Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman was placed on trial here today for the second time on an indictment charging her with the murder of Mrs. Louise D. Bailey, at Freeport. The jury in the first trial disagreed and Mrs. Carman has been at liberty under bond.

Mrs. Carman, accompanied by her husband, Dr. Edward Carman, appeared in court, pale, but smiling, and seemed to be in better health than at her first trial.

District Attorney Smith said it might require a week to present the state's case. Several witnesses, it was reported, would be called to support the state's contention that Mrs. Carman was the unseen assailant who shot Mrs. Bailey to death in Dr. Carman's office last June.

Selection of the jury proceeded slowly. Counsel for Mrs. Carman said before the trial began that he had no new evidence and that the number of witnesses for the defense would be reduced by the fact that Frank J. Farrell, the tramp who testified against Mrs. Carman in the first trial, was not to be called by the prosecution this time.

FIRST SPIKE IS DRIVEN IN ALASKAN RAILROAD

Work on the First Section of New Line Is Begun at Ship Creek

(By Associated Press.)

SEWARD, Alaska, May 3.—Work on the first section of the federal government's Alaska railroad has been begun at Shipcreek according to word received here today. The first spike was driven Thursday by Martha White, the first white child born on Ship Creek.

Notice was posted at Ship Creek announcing the engineering commission would not employ squatters. All squatmen this summer and that those going to Ship Creek with the idea of finding employment would be disappointed.

Squatters, who staked claims on the terminal tract here, have withdrawn from the land. Some of them, however, delayed removing their tents and log cabins when new comers pitched over the trail for Ship Creek, read notices ordering immediate removal of their tents and carried them away. The squatters had been notified by the commission that the town site would be located elsewhere, as the government intends to use the reserve for terminal purposes.

SUPPLIES FOR BELGIUM ARE NOT BEING HELD UP

American Relief Commission Denies Barges Were Stopped at Rotterdam

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 3.—The American Belgian relief commission today denied a report published by the Daily Mail that barges loaded with the commission's supplies are being held at Rotterdam because of friction with German authorities.

These barges have been diverted, the commission explains, because the warehouses in Belgium hold food for one month ahead. The cargoes now being discharged are to be stored in Rotterdam.

ITALIAN WOMAN ADVISED NOT TO ENTER GERMANY

Delegate to Peace Conference Is Warned That Situation Now Is Tense

(By Associated Press.)

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, May 3.—(Via London.)—Signora Genoni, one of the Italian delegates to the Women's International Peace Congress, which has just ended here, today received a personal letter from Italy advising her not to attempt to return through Germany, owing to the feeling there against Italy. The writer referred also to serious proviar rioting in the past few days in Milan and other cities in northern Italy.

ABOLISH WHITE SUITS FOR MEN OF U. S. NAVY

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Surgeon J. C. Pryor, of the navy, who is already on record as favoring the banishment of lanyards, balloon trousers and other fashionable features of the sailor's uniform, garb distinctive, has now submitted a report recommending that the wearing of white clothing by naval forces be abandoned.

While admitting that white clothing has some advantages, Surgeon Pryor thinks it affords the enemy a target easily distinguishable and in addition is impracticable because so easily soiled. To escape snipers at Vera Cruz last year, he says, the American naval forces in many instances colored their white uniforms with improvised dyes, coffee and even mud. Surgeon Pryor believes khaki, olive drab or dark-colored material would make more practical uniforms.

Russians Crushed in Galicia By Austrians, Declares Berlin

SHARP FIGHTING IS RESUMED BY KAISER IN YPRES VICINITY

London and Paris Claim New German Thrust Failed, but Berlin Declares It Was Successful

BOTH SIDES CLAIMING VICTORY AT GALLIPOLI

Allies Claim Advance--Turks Claim Repulse to Land Troops and Damage to Fleet. Town Destroyed, Report

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—An imposing Austrian victory in western Galicia was announced today by the German war office. It is said the Austrians, "pierced and everywhere crushed" the entire Russian line.

An attack from that quarter has been predicted in Petrograd dispatches as at offset to Russian efforts further east on the Carpathian front. The direction in which this new and sudden stroke has been made, lies to the south of Russian Poland. The line of advance runs for about sixty miles north and south through Galicia, extending as far as 30 miles east of Cracow.

The victory in western Galicia reported in the german official announcement would appear to be of notable significance.

From the junction of the Vistula with the Dunajec to the Hungarian frontier is about sixty miles. After the surrender of Przemysl, the Russian armies released from siege work there began flowing south toward Uszok pass, and west, toward Cracow.

That a great battle was being fought, in the Carpathians, was indicated in Berlin dispatches for several days.

Official dispatches from Petrograd said only that the Austro-Germans were concentrating in western Galicia, apparently for a determined offensive.

Sharp Fighting Has Been Resumed in Flanders

French, German and British official statements tell of German attacks near Hill No. 60, which the British recently captured, and in the vicinity of St. Julien, both to the Ypres region. The Paris and London communications say the German onslaughts failed, but a Berlin characterizes the movements as successful and says that a farm north of St. Julien was captured. It is said in the German report that Hartmans-Weilerkopf, the Alsatian height, which has been claimed by both sides recently, was attacked yesterday by the French.

The British war office announced that the allied forces which landed on Gallipoli peninsula had been prevented from making headway. It is said the British battleship Vengeance, previously reported damaged, and the French battleship Henry IV were struck by shells.

Information from the Dardanelles by way of London is that the bombardment of the Turkish forts was resumed on Saturday and that great damage was inflicted by the allies' warships. The town of Kum Kale is said to have been destroyed. The Turkish war office, however, says no action was attempted by the allied fleet that day. Fresh troops are reported to have made another landing on the asiatic side and to be advancing rapidly.

It is believed in Rome, Austria and Germany will be decided on another effort to prolong the conflict between Italy, and the central empires in the hope of expediting a peaceful settlement of the territorial dispute. For this purpose it is said that Count Golochowski, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, will go to Rome.

The Italian cabinet has decided not to interfere in the expelling of partisans of Italy's remaining neutral, it is thought in Rome that parliament may assist the cabinet in reaching a decision which now appears to be almost inevitable.

Austrians Break Through Russian Front, Says Berlin

BERLIN, May 3.—(Via London.)—An important Austrian victory is announced in the communication issued today from German army headquarters. Both wings of the Austrians have pierced and broken the entire Russian front in West Galicia.

The text of the official statement follows:

"In the western theater: Yesterday we captured the Hartmans-Weilerkopf. East of the Poelcapelle-Ypres road and north of the farms of Fortuin, southeast of St. Julien.

"In the Champagne district we inflicted considerable damage on the enemy's positions at Ouchan. Sonda and Perthes by successful mine explosions.

"Bits to the Meuse and the Moselle there were no military events.

"Last night the French made unsuccessful counter attacks at several points on the summit of Hartmans-Weilerkopf.

"A French flying machine landed yesterday at Hundlingen, west of Saargemund and Bliesbruck. Both aviators were taken prisoner.

"A German airship squadron attacked the airship hangar and railway station at Epinal yesterday, apparently with good results.

"On the eastern theater: 'During further pursuit of the Russians who were fleeing in the direction of Riga, we yesterday captured four cannon and four machine guns. We also took 1,700 prisoners south of Mitau, so that the total number of prisoners was increased to 2,200.

"The Russians attacks southeast of Kalwarya, failed, with heavy losses to the enemy. The Russians were driven

DORSEY PETITIONS COURT TO RE-SENTENCE FRANK

Solicitor Holds There Is Now No Legal Obstacle in Way of Execution

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey submitted a petition to Judge Ben H. Hill, of the superior court, Monday asking that a date for the hanging of Leo M. Frank under the original sentence of death of August 26, 1913, be set by the court.

After Judge Hill received the solicitor's petition, it was announced that no action would be taken by the court Monday. It is thought that an order on the petition will be handed down Tuesday.

This order may be either in the form of a rule nisi, citing L. E. Rosser, H. C. Peeples, and H. A. Alexander, attorneys of record for Frank, to appear and show cause why Frank should not be resentenced or else an order citing Frank and his attorneys to appear in court for Frank to be re-sentenced, or, on the other hand, Judge Hill may not issue any order at all, holding that such would not legally issue until the mandate of the United States supreme court is received by Judge Newman, and then formally sent to the Fulton superior court.

In the petition, which was submitted despite the fact that the mandate of the United States supreme court, refusing Frank's application for a habeas corpus hearing has not yet reached Atlanta, Solicitor Dorsey sets out that there is no legal reason why Frank should not be now resentenced, because, with the adverse decision of the United States supreme court, April 19, all pleadings orders in the case have been dissolved.

Under the rule of the United States supreme court, thirty days must elapse before a mandate comes down to the district court, the Frank decision having been made April 19, the mandate to Judge Newman's court, refusing Frank's appeal, is expected about May 20.

Attorneys for Frank, when informed of Mr. Dorsey's unexpected move, said they had no comment to make. It is understood, however, that no action will be taken to combat whatever Judge Hill does in regard to the solicitor's petition.

At the office of the state prison commission Monday it was stated that the date for hearing Frank's petition for executive clemency would not be set until after all court procedure had ended and a date for execution of his sentence had been fixed.

SOLICITOR'S PETITION.

Solicitor Dorsey's petition, containing a brief history of the Frank case, follows:

"To the superior court of Fulton county:

"Hugh M. Dorsey, solicitor general, respectfully shows:

"That Leo M. Frank was indicted on the 24th day of May, 1913, for the offense of murder.

"That at the July term of the superior court of Fulton county, said Frank was tried, and, on the 26th day of August, 1913, a verdict of guilty was rendered.

"On the 26th of August, 1913, this court sentenced said Frank to be hanged, execution of sentence being set for the 10th day of October, 1913.

"Thereafter, the said Frank filed his motion for a new trial, which, being overruled, he took the case to the supreme court of Georgia, where the judgment of this court was affirmed.

GRAND JURY IS TOLD TO PROBE LIQUOR QUESTION

Judge Hill in Charge Says If Law Is Not Being Violated Jury Should Say So

In his charge to the grand jury for the May term Monday morning, Judge Benjamin H. Hill, of the superior court, urging that all violations of the law be investigated and indictments returned, declared that if the state prohibition law is not being violated the grand jury should so state, and that if it is being violated the violators should be detected and indicted.

"I don't want you to be dummies nor do I want you to be detectives," said Judge Hill. "But you should not merely return presentments concerning the jail, roads and the like, but regarding the liquor question, too. Until you do that, you are failing in your duty as grand jurors."

Stressing the importance of law enforcement, Judge Hill said that no greater calamity could befall a community than constant violation of its laws, that every law should be enforced or anarchy would eventually prevail. If a grand juror knows by public opinion or his own knowledge or information brought to his attention, that the law is being violated, it is his duty to investigate and indict, he said.

"People will come before you and volunteer information regarding alleged violations of the prohibition law," he said, "and any intelligent man can tell from their statements whether or not the places where liquor is sold are coming within the law."

UP TO GRAND JURY.

The grand jury, he declared, is the one greater power of law enforcement. Unlike its acts, other officials are powerless: that the chief of police is powerless; that the solicitor, "who is only a bad-carrier of evidence," is powerless; that the judge himself is powerless.

"All I can do," he said, "is to tell you the law. You must get the evidence."

He called attention to that part of the state law which refers to "bona-fide" places for the sale of liquor, and said that some locker clubs came under this head and some did not; that it is easy to find out which are bona-fide and which are simply bar-rooms run for the sake of profit.

"I as judge and you as jurors have no right to any opinion at all," he said. "Nor no police commissioners nor no one else have any right to an opinion. The law stands alone."

BEER SALOONS.

He said it was the duty of the grand jury to inquire into the status of selling "near-beer", to indict them if they are selling real beer under this guise; that manufacturers of liquors should also be investigated to see whether or not they are complying with the law.

"You have the right to give this permission in violation of the law," he said, "no man from the governor on down can give it. If the law is being violated under any circumstances it is your bounden duty to make inquiries and indict."

Referring to the law on "pistol-toting," Judge Hill said that nobody is exempt from it, that those who carry weapons must either carry them openly or get licenses.

"I hope you will find no place in Fulton county where the law against gaming is being violated," he said. "But it is your duty to investigate and if

FIGHT ON MAYOR'S VETO IS DUE IN COUNCIL TODAY

Amendment Takes From Him Power to Appoint City Purchasing Agent

Monday afternoon's session of the city council will be featured by the fight to declare void the veto of Mayor Woodward to the amendment which takes the power of appointing the city purchasing agent from his hands.

A leader in the fight against the mayor will be Councilman Claude C. Mason, of the Tenth ward, who will resign after the conclusion of the session to take the position of chief clerk to the ordinary.

Mr. Mason is chairman of the minutes committee of council and he will refuse to certify to the clerk's minutes, which say that the purchasing agent amendment was passed by the common council at the last meeting.

Mr. Mason was presiding at the time, and despite the clerk's records, says that the general council, not the common council, voted on the paper.

Mr. Mason's expected resignation has brought about a hot race for his place between George P. Dickson, formerly a police commissioner, and A. T. Peacock, a professor at the Georgia School of Technology. The place will not be filled until the next meeting of council. At present time the indications are that Prof. Peacock will be elected to the position.

A lively clash is expected during the session, when Alderman Jesse W. Arnold intends introduce an ordinance to authorize the board of education to credit city school teachers for work done in the schools of other cities. The mayor's supporters are expected to oppose the ordinance.

FLOOD SITUATION IN TEXAS STILL SERIOUS

(By Associated Press.)

HOUSTON, Texas, May 3.—With thousands of acres of farming land under water and railway service disorganized, flood conditions in the Brazos river lowlands remained serious today, but improvement soon is expected.

The crest of the North Texas flood is expected to begin entering the gulf within twenty-four hours, bringing rapid subsidence.

Conditions in the Colorado river bottoms are reported to be improving steadily.

ILLNESS OF WITNESS DEFERS INGHRAM CASE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

WASHINGTON, Ga., May 3.—The sudden illness of Mrs. A. C. Boardman, of Atlanta a material witness in the Ingham-Richardson breach of promise suit, which was to have been tried today, caused the case to be continued until the August term of Wilkes county superior court.

Judge Hutcheson will preside over the case when it is called for trial. The court has some little sympathy with a gentleman poker player who plays for small stakes, but will show no mercy to professional gamblers.

CLOSER CO-OPERATION IS URGED IN CHARITY WORK

Ministers Want Associated Charities and Chamber to Be Closer Together

Closer co-operation between the Associated Charities and the various churches of Atlanta was urged at a meeting of the Atlanta Evangelical Ministers' association at their regular monthly meeting Monday morning. The association referred to a committee composed of two members of each Protestant denomination in the city, plans for the reorganization of a home which will serve as a shelter to girls who are in unfortunate circumstances from loss of employment of who need the protecting influence of Christian companions and environment.

Dr. A. M. Hughlett, presiding elder of the North Georgia Methodist conference, presided. An interesting address was made by Dr. Phillip M. Waters, president of Gammon seminary, in which he pleaded for co-operation and less friction between denominations. Dr. Waters pointed out that the churches were handicapped through too close adherence to the denominational ideal and showed that in the mission field abroad, denominations were often forced together with the result that each found that the bread it was teaching the same Christ they were. He said that the more enlightened people became the dimmer were the barriers between the various denominations, and urged that the prayers of the ministers be that all barriers soon be removed.

ALLEGED MOONSHINER IS CAUGHT WHILE SLEEPING

Will Champion Was Regular Arsenal When Captured by Revenue Officers

United States deputy marshals last Sunday captured Will Champion, an alleged moonshine outlaw of four years' standing, on the top of Burnt mountain, in Dawson county. Champion was a sleeping arsenal, an automatic shotgun, a dirk and other weapons being handy in the hayloft where the deputies found him.

J. H. Pendleton, of Ellijay, and Tom Curtis, of Canton, deputy marshals, had been on Champion's trail for several weeks. Finally they learned he was in a hut on the mountain top, and on their hands and knees they crawled a quarter of a mile to the place.

They found the hutempty, but crawling to a hayloft behind the place they climbed up to Champion's sleeping quarters in the hay. They covered him while he slept and before he could lay hand on the weapons ready at his head.

Officers had been after Champion for four years. He had been caught several times, but had always managed to escape. The officers said he was the best runner and hound jumper in north Georgia, besides being known as a desperate man.

A few days before, the officers captured Plem Cantrell, pal of Champion, who is wanted in Alabama. Champion, they said, got wind of this capture and was especially wary.

WASHINGTON CHEERED BY REPORTS ON BUSINESS

Reserve Bank Agents Say Improved Conditions Are Noted Over Whole Country

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Official Washington was cheered today over the business outlook throughout the country as disclosed in reports to the federal reserve board from its agents in each of the twelve reserve districts. Briefly summarized, these reports indicated a general improvement in trade conditions and returning confidence. A feature is the reported activity of industries supplying war materials.

The board's announcement describes the improvement in the New York district as general; in the Boston district as slight; Philadelphia fair, and Cleveland good.

From the Atlanta district is reported increased activity; Chicago reports activity, but not pronounced; in the Minneapolis, Kansas City and St. Louis districts crops are said to control the situation.

Dallas and San Francisco report encouraging prospects, while in Richmond progress is still retarded by war conditions.

MINING SCHOOL MAY BE LOCATED IN TENNESSEE

Aid of Atlantians in Educating Mountain Youths Is Solicited

For the purpose of interviewing a number of well-known Atlantians relative to the establishment of a school for the development of the mountain youth of the Cumberland region, Dr. C. H. S. Jackson, former president of Bessie Tift college, Forsyth Ga., was in the city today.

"Overtures are being made," stated Dr. Jackson, "for the location of a great mining school in the vast forest and mining territory of the Tennessee mountains, which when established will be operated as a college, and will have departments for both girls and boys. The purpose of the backers is to promote every form of industry connected with the lives of the people in that territory, and as such the institution will prove a social factor as well as being educational.

"There is only one other like school in the world," he said, "and that is located in Germany, where the backward people of the mountain regions are being greatly benefited."

ACTUAL WORK ON BIG FAIR TO BEGIN SOON

Directors to Consider Awarding of General Contract at Meeting Monday

Actual steps toward the beginning of the Southeastern fair at Lakewood will be taken Monday afternoon at a meeting of the directors of the fair association at the chamber of commerce.

The first thing to be considered will be the awarding of the grading contract. This job will be done by contract, and actual work should be started in the next two weeks.

The topographical plan of the grounds calls for the moving of 10,000 to 11,000 cubic yards of dirt.

No other special matters were scheduled for consideration by the directors, although the general plans of the fair will no doubt be taken up for discussion.

Several applications for work on the fair have already been made at the chamber of commerce by contractors and workmen.

CONGREGATIONAL SESSION AT CHURCH OF EPIPHANY

Senior and Junior Warden and Vestrymen Will Be Elected Tonight

The annual congregational meeting of the Church of the Epiphany, the Inman Park Episcopal church, will be held Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the church. This meeting is held in accordance with the requirements of the church warden and also vestrymen, those so elected to constitute the official church board for the coming year.

Reports are also rendered at this meeting of all the activities of the parish for the past year. Plans have been recently set on foot for the establishment of a vested choir in the church, which will add greatly to the interest of the services. These will probably be discussed.

Among the important questions to be discussed tonight by the congregation will be that of disposing of the present site of the church, an offer having recently been made for the lot.

overruled, was carried to the supreme court, where the judgmfent of the lower court was affirmed.

"Thereafter, the said Frank filed an extraordinary motion for a new trial, on the same being overruled by the court it was taken to the supreme court and the judgement of the lower court affirmed.

"Simultaneously with the filing of the extraordinary motion, the said Frank filed a motion to set aside the verdict of the jury upon certain grounds. This court denied said motion. Exception to this ruling was duly taken and the case taken to the supreme court of Georgia, and said judgment refusing to set aside the verdict was also affirmed.

"The judgments of the supreme court above referred to have been by appropriate orders made the judgments of this court.

"Said Frank applied to the supreme court of Georgia for a writ of error to the supreme court of the United States in the case in which the motion to set aside the verdict was made, and thereafter applied to the supreme court of the United States for a writ of error. Both courts denied said writ.

WRIT WAS DENIED.

"Said Frank thereafter made application to the United States district court for the northern district of Georgia for a writ of habeas corpus. Said court denied said writ and refused an appeal thereon. Subsequently, said Frank applied to the justice of the United States supreme court in charge of this jurisdiction, and obtained an appeal from the decision of the district court of the northern district of Georgia. Said appeal was heard by the supreme court of the United States, and by adverse decision to said Frank, sustaining the United States district court for the northern district of Georgia, was handed down by said United States supreme court on Monday, April 19, 1915.

"There now exists, all superseding orders entered in the case of the state of Georgia vs. said Frank having been dissolved, no legal obstacle to the execution of the sentence passed by this court on the 26 of August, 1913, as aforesaid.

"Said Leo M. Frank is now incarcerated in the common jail of Fulton county, Georgia, his person being in the custody and keeping of C. W. Mangum, sheriff of said county.

"It is necessary to have said Leo M. Frank brought before this court for the purpose of having a date set for the execution of the sentence heretofore pronounced.

"Where, petitioner prays:

"That this court grant the state's writ of habeas corpus, directed to said C. W. Mangum, sheriff, as aforesaid, commanding and requiring him to produce the person of said Leo M. Frank before the court at the court room of the Fulton superior court, criminal division, at such time as the court seems meet and proper, to the end that the date of the execution of the sentence heretofore passed by this court may be reset, and the judgment of the court carried out."

LOCKER CLUBS REPORTED "DRY AS A BONE" SUNDAY

Police Chief Beavers Greatly Pleased With Way Law Is Being Observed

After inspecting the various clubs in the city Sunday, plain clothes men reported to Chief Beavers that all of them were "dry."

The chief expressed himself as gratified at the report and expressed the hope that he would not have to make cases against the clubs for violations of the Sunday tipling law or for the violation of the general prohibition laws on the week days.

Monday marked no new activity against the clubs on the part of the police chief, although Monday morning it was reported the chief would likely begin his personal inspection of the clubs during the day.

DENIES THE CANADIAN PARLIAMENT IS DISSOLVED

OTTAWA, Ont., May 3.—A definite decision will be reached by the government this week on the question of holding an election in June. A denial of the report that parliament had been dissolved and that elections were to be held June 28, was issued by the government today. The government memorandum continues: "Parliament has not been dissolved. The subject has not been definitely considered and any report to the contrary is entirely imaginative."

The expectation in official circles here is that if dissolution should be decided on polling would take place either June 21 or 28.

It's a mighty short way to pipe-joy

if you go via Prince Albert—tobacco that answers every question any man can hand out! You can jam it in your old jimmy pipe or roll it into a makin's cigarette and it will produce more real and true happiness than any brand at any price you ever bucked up against. Now, let's all get together, and repeat slowly and distinctly:

PRINCE ALBERT

can't bite your tongue, and can't parch your throat, because it is made by a patented process that removes the bite and the parch. No other tobacco ever was or can be made like P. A. And P. A. tastes as good as that sounds!

So the warm tip is: Get the jimmy pipes out of dark corners, out of the rafters, where you've hidden them for fear of more tongue bites. Get 'em out and fire up with P. A., for you can go to it fancy-free from sun-up right down the line to the pillow-period!

And the sooner you know this little thing personally, the more joy'us you'll be.

Prince Albert is sold everywhere in toppy red bags, 5c; tidy red tins, 10c; pound and half-pound tin humidors—and—that classy pound crystal-glass humidor with sponge-moistener top that just beats the band for keeping P. A. fine like silk. You buy one quick.

CUBA IS ONE COUNTRY PROFITING BY THE WAR

"Sugar Crop Alone Is Worth $200,000,000 This Year," Says N. H. Davis

"Cuba is one country that is profiting greatly by the war in Europe," said Norman H. Davis, head of the Trust Company of Cuba, Monday. Mr. Davis is in the city for a few days on his way to Sewanee, Tenn., where he will deliver an address before the students of the University of the South.

"Cuba's sugar crop will sell for $200,000,000 this year," he said. "The balance of trade in favor of Cuba will be about $100,000,000. When you consider that the population is about 2,000,000, that means $100 a head coming into the country.

"Russia and Germany have been producing each about as much sugar as Cuba, and this supply is now cut off. The United States gets half of her sugar from Cuba and the other half from Louisiana, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the beet sugar industries in the west. England, which has bought largely from Germany in the past, is in the market for Cuban sugar now. If the war continues until next October there is no telling where the price of sugar will go."

Mr. Davis, who has been in Havana for about ten years, is one of the most successful Americans in Cuba, and has wide and varied interests there. He will deliver an address on "Banking" next Wednesday at Sewanee, upon the invitation of Chancellor Knight, former bishop of Cuba. The university has invited several distinguished men to speak there, including Colonel George W. Goethals, builder of the Panama canal, and Dr. W. C. Gorgas, the great expert on sanitation.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis are visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. Walter G. Paschall, at her home on Highland avenue.

WOMAN IN BAD CONDITION

Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Montpelier, Vt. — "We have great faith in your remedies. I was very irregular and was tired and sleepy all the time, would have cold chills, and my hands and feet would bloat. My stomach bothered me, I had pain in my side and a bad headache most of the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me lots of good and I now feel fine. I am regular, my stomach is better and my pains have all left me. You can use my name if you like. I am proud of what your remedies have done for me." — Mrs. MARY GAUTHIER, 21 Ridge St., Montpelier, Vt.

An Honest Dependable Medicine

It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for nearly forty years, and to-day hold a record for thousands upon thousands of actual cures, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

YOUNG HUSBAND MUST SERVE TERM ON FARM

Passed Worthless Checks While on Probation for Similar Offense, Charge

For passing six worthless checks, amounting to over $50, after he had been sentenced and placed on probation for passing other worthless checks, F. J. Turner Jr., a young insurance man, pleaded guilty and was sentenced by Judge Andy Calhoun Monday to twelve months on the state farm with no alternative of a fine.

Judge Calhoun, in passing sentence, despite the plea of a young attorney, who begged that Turner be given still another chance because of his pretty young wife and infant child, said that the court was responsible, by placing Turner upon probation the first time, for the subsequent passing of worthless checks, and said that Turner ought to be placed on the state farm, where such acts would be impossible.

Detective Bass arrested Turner the second time state that there were nearly forty worthless checks passed while he was on probation. The original charges against him accused him of passing thirty-five worthless checks on merchants all over Atlanta.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ROME, Ga., May 3.—Rome real estate owners have formed an organization which promises to be a potent factor in the county and city. E. P. Harvey is in charge of the organization work and the plans and purposes of the body will be to aid the farmers in producing home products and diversifying crops, the improving of unsightly and unsanitary houses, making real estate investments more attractive, the bringing of foreign money to lend on local realty and to get farmers to come here from outside the state and county.

HOWELL CONVICTED OF PASSING BAD CHECKS

A. M. Howell, forty years old, formerly school commissioner for Lee county, pleaded guilty to passing worthless checks Monday morning and was sentenced by Judge Ben H. Hill, of the superior court, to twelve months or a fine of $200. Howell stated he had been given the worthless checks by A. D. Oliver, the banker of Lee county, who was recently shot and killed, and that he passed them in Atlanta without knowing they were not good.

He said he was broke and went to Oliver for help and Oliver advanced him money in the form of the checks.

ATLANTA AN EXAMPLE TO ALL GEORGIA TOWNS

Asserting that "every town in Georgia is looking to Atlanta and is controlled by the example of Atlanta," Dr. A. R. Holderby preached a sermon Sunday in the Presbyterian gospel tent at East Point on "Stumbling Blocks." Dr. Holderby said that Atlanta, by permitting the handling of whisky by locker clubs in violation of the law and by permitting near beer saloons licensed by the vote of church members, put stumbling blocks of lawlessness and drunkenness in the way of her own people and the people of the entire state of Georgia.

PUT MORE VIM IN TOIL ADVICE TO NEGRO RACE

In an impressive sermon to his congregation Sunday morning, Dr. H. H. Proctor, pastor of the First Congregational church, colored, advised his hearers to put more spirit and vim into their daily toil, that so "doing would take out of it much of its drudgery." He pointed out to them the value of friendship, and how to cultivate it, and also the benefits derived from a religious spent Sabbath day.

BABIES' NAMES INSCRIBED ON SUNDAY SCHOOL ROLL

More Than 200 Names Added to Cradle Roll of the Baptist Tabernacle

When the Sunday school of the Baptist Tabernacle convened Sunday morning over 200 baby boys and girls, all under three years of age, were present and had their names inscribed on the cradle roll, thus establishing a record for youthful membership among Atlanta Sunday schools.

Among the babies presented with certificates was Alonzo Melvin Smith, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Smith, of 33 Mell avenue, who probably holds a world's record for uniting with the Sunday school at the earliest age known. Six months ago, when little Alonzo was born, his name was placed on the roll two minutes after he came into the world. His father is active superintendent of the Tabernacle primary department.

Another notable member was Catherine Lucile Williams, nineteen months old. When she was presented with her certificate Sunday four members of her family, representing four generations, were present: the baby; her mother, Mrs. P. A. Williams; her grandmother, Mrs. D. Rogers, and her great-grandmother, Mrs. T. C. Jackson.

RICH BROS. CO. CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY WITH BIG SALE

Annual Anniversary Sale Which Began Monday Will Continue Through May

M. Rich & Bros. Co., Atlanta's big department store, Monday celebrated its forty-eighth birthday, and for the next four weeks will hold the annual anniversary sale, which is always looked forward to by its patrons with great interest.

Monday was the first day of the sale. Under American flags and other gala decorations crowds swarmed the store all day exclaiming over the attractive displays of goods, led on from counter to counter by the lure of quality and reasonable prices that beckoned on every hand. The sale will continue throughout the month.

It was just forty-eight years ago that Morris, Rich and his brother, Daniel, opened a little store in a frame house; they had moved from Stone Mountain to the corner of Peachtree and the L. & N. railroad tracks, a spot which the viaduct now spans. Atlanta at that time was striving to rebuild itself from the ruins of war, and the new store was a venture.

In 1867 it moved to 36 Whitehall street, where Maier & Berkele's annex now stands, and Emanuel Rich, the father brother was taken into the firm. The 20,000 to 25,000 people in Atlanta at that time were easily accommodated by the store. Today ten and twenty times that number, not only in Atlanta, but throughout the south, are its patrons.

For M. Rich & Bros. kept pace with Atlanta's growth. The firm grew, trips to New York became more frequent, foreign connections were established, direct importations inaugurated. In 1901 the store was incorporated, with Lucien York, D. H. Strauss and Walter Rich members of the board of directors, and Morris and Daniel Rich acting in an advisory capacity.

While today the store has grown to massive proportions physically and is recognized as one of the largest in the country, it still retains the policy of its founders—quality, service and satisfaction to each and every purchaser. This has been its motto throughout its forty-eight years of growth, and today it is the principle which is instilled in every employe and branch of the store.

To celebrate its birthday and its success the anniversary sale was inaugurated. Contrary to the policy of most stores, a full program for the month's sale has been announced. This includes such red letter sale days as the following: May 3, silks; May 7, jewelry; May 8, ribbons; May 11, laces; May 13, art goods; May 17, muslinwear; May 19, hosiery and underwear; May 21, millinery; May 22, house furnishings; May 25 ready-to-wear; May 27, shoes.

ROOSEVELT STARTS PROBE INTO NEW YORK PRINTING

Claims Money Was Wasted and That William Barnes Profited Thereby

(By Associated Press.)

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 3.—The award and execution in Albany of contracts for public printing were subjects of testimony when witnesses summoned by Theodore Roosevelt in the supreme court here today. It is claimed by the colonel in his answer to William Barnes' libel suit against him that much money belonging to the state and the city and county of Albany was wasted in printing public documents and that Mr. Barnes benefitted thereby. Michael Donlan, manager of the Argus company of Albany, told of printing contracts awarded by the common council of Albany. He explained the repeated use of the same type composition. To some cases he said the company figured on a profit of 25 cents a page for printing such documents as the proceedings of the common council. In others where the bid was $1.25 per page and the same type composition was used, profits on $1.00 per page was figured.

An item in the books of the Argus company showed that the Albany Journal, in which Barnes is a stockholder, had been billed for the annual report of the board of education.

"Were you under an agreement with the Journal to give 15 per cent on all orders received from the common council?" the witness was asked.

"We agreed to pay 15 per cent if we would get the work of printing their extras."

Mr. Barnes produced a book barked "printed by the Journal company."

"Who printed it?"

"The Argus company," replied Mr. Donlan.

"In 1909 and 1911, did you pay the Journal company 15 per cent for all moneys you received from the city?"

"Yes," replied the witness.

BARNES REFUSED HELP.

That Barnes told him, Charles F. Murphy, of Tammany hall, had asked for help in 1911 to defeat a direct primaries bill in the state legislature, and that Barnes, then chairman of the Republican state committee, had refused the aid asked and had remarked he would not pull the Tammany leader's chestnuts from the fire," was the testimony given today by Walter T. Arndt, formerly Albany correspondent of a New York newspaper.

Mr. Arndt was one of several witnesses placed on the stand by the defense. Another was Edward T. Platt, son of the late Thomas C. Platt. He produced several bundles of musty letters taken from the files kept by his father from 1889 to 1909, and then was excused until counsel for both sides should have gone over the documents.

Arndt, asked about an interview he had with the plaintiff in 1911, said:

"I saw Mr. Barnes in the state Republican headquarters in New York. We discussed the direct primaries bill. Mr. Barnes said he had received a message from Murphy that the primaries bill was likely to pass unless the Republicans were to unite with the Democrats. The substance of the thing was that Mr. Murphy wanted Mr. Barnes to help him defeat the measure. Mr. Barnes told me it was none of his business, and that Mr. Murphy could pull his own chestnuts out of the fire."

Jacob J. Dickinson, formerly Albany correspondent of the New York Herald, and now diplomatic representative for the Panama-Pacific exposition with offices in the state department, testified to talking with Mr. Barnes in Albany in 1908.

"Mr. Barnes told me party success was his paramount aim," said the witness. "Mr. Barnes told me also that he had a talk with Governor Hughes about race track legislation. He said he had reminded Governor Hughes that the race track question had been carefully avoided, and had asked him why he had brought the thing up. Mr. Barnes said Governor Hughes told him his conscience had dictated his action. To that Mr. Barnes said if it was an issue between conscience and votes they had no common ground upon which to stand."

German Fortress of Metz Under Fire of Great French Guns

Paris Claims That French Fire Has Been Efficacious Against One of the Forts on the South Front

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 3.—French guns are hammering at the great German fortress of Metz, according to the official statement issued in Paris.

The French claim that their fire has been efficacious against one of the forts on the south front of Metz and the German barracks and the railway nearby.

The French occupation of the summit of Hartmans-Weilerkopf is confirmed in a dispatch from a correspondent, who has just returned to Paris from a visit to the French positions there. The entire hill has been devastated as a result of fighting which has been going on there for weeks.

BOARDING WATER WAGON A CINCH FOR KING GEORGE

English Ruler Never Drank Much and Total Abstinence Is Very Easy

LONDON, April 25.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The banning of alcohol from the royal household will fall rather lightly on King George, who, according to court officials, is almost an abstainer even in normal times. He has occasionally taken a small glass of claret with his luncheon, but more often he preferred aerated water. At dinner, burgundy and champagne were always served, but the king frequently tasted neither one, and never indulged in more than a minute quantity.

The queen's taste in alcoholic beverages is as restricted as the king's, while Princess Mary scarcely knows the taste of wine.

Since the ban on alcoholics at court was promulgated, the energies of the kitchen staff have been turned to devising palatable temperance drinks. The usual parchment "wine list" is still made out daily and laid on the king's table in its customary silver frame, but the list of available drinks is limited to lemonade, ginger beer, soda water, fruit cups, and the king's favorite, barley water.

Although the royal wine cellars, with their almost priceless store of vintage wines, are technically fastened up for the duration of the war, they are not really kept sealed, for periodical entrances have to be made, as special temperatures and humidities must be maintained in various compartments, according to the character of the wines stored there.

But it is fairly certain that not a single bottle will be opened, nor any tap of the countless great barrels turned, until the king gives the word. For the royal cellars are managed in business-like fashion, and every pint removed from shelf or cask must be shown on the ledgers with proper indorsement.

For the present, all these ledgers and stock books are clasped on their shelves, and the bookkeepers and wine butler's assistants have been assigned to other duties about the palace. The king was most particular to direct that no one employed in the wine cellars should be dismissed as a result of his ban on alcohol. Other posts were found, at the same wages, for all those displaced, some in the new kitchen department which provides lemonade and barley water for the court.

The king's ban does not prevent any member of the royal household from purchasing and drinking alcoholic liquors outside the palace, but as a matter of fact, the majority of the household staff have followed the royal example of total abstinence throughout the war.

TYPHUS FEVER SITUATION IS IMPROVING IN SERBIA

Improvement Is Attributed to Assistance Sent the Country From Other Nations

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—The typhus fever situation in Serbia is not now so critical as it was six weeks ago, according to Dr. Clapham King, of the American Red Cross society, who returned from Serbia yesterday with thirteen nurses, who have been serving in France and Serbia. He attributed this improvement to the assistance sent to Serbia from various countries.

Dr. King and eight of the nurses have recently recovered from attacks of typhus contracted while working in Serbia. They were members of the original units sent to that country when the war broke out. Of twelve nurses and six doctors sent to Serbia, eight of the former and five of the latter were victims of the disease, according to Dr. King, who said two of the surgeons, Drs. Donnelly and Magruder, died from typhus.

Dr. King and the nurses who arrived here were stationed at Gievgelia, where, he said, typhus prevailed in its worst form. The four remaining nurses of the unit and one doctor have now been removed to Belgrade, the work at Gievgelia having been turned over to the Serbians.

Stephen Bonsal, secretary to Governor General Harrison, of the Philippines, who has just arrived here, was for ten days a guest of Field Marshal von Hindenberg on the Russian battle front. He said his connection with the United States government forbade him talking of what he had seen. He saw two engagements in which the Russians were driven back.

PACKERS SAY ENGLAND IS CRIPPLING NEUTRAL TRADE

Millions of Dollars Worth of Provisions Are Tied Up in British Prize Courts

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, April 13.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—With millions of dollars' worth of provisions tied up by the British admiralty and virtually no opportunity to ship foodstuffs to Norway, Denmark and Sweden, European representatives of American packers have lost all patience with what they call the dilatory tactics of English officials and no longer are disposed to accept in good faith the promises of the British foreign office and admiralty that immediate steps will be taken to facilitate neutral trade with neutral countries.

The prize court of Sir Samuel Evans, judge of the prize court, to grant immediate trial to the Norwegian ships Alfred Nobel, Bjornstjerne Bjornson, Kim and Fridland, seized at Kirkwall in November, was the worst blow neutral ships and shipping has had so far. The hearing was fixed for June 7 on request of counsel for the crown, who pleaded for more time to investigate the cases.

Attorneys for the Norwegian ship owners regarded their clients would be ruined by further delay.

All four of the vessels carry extensive American cargoes chiefly packers' products. Twelve other ships which carried packers' products have been thrown into the prize courts. They are: Arkansas, Antilla, Frogner, Elsa, Gerland, Maracas, New Sweden, Kjorsford, Salta, Sandefjord, Taunus and Strekfjord. All their cargoes have been held pending investigation.

Alfred R. Dion of Chicago, legal representative of the Chicago packers, who has been in London since January, today described the situation as follows:

"Prize court authorities have definitely refused to release our goods except on the terms of the consignors undertaking to sell the goods in Great Britain and to give English bail in the full value of the seized cargoes. The first of these conditions is impossible, because most of the goods have been packed for continental markets and are unsalable here. The suggestion that American packers give English bail for their own goods is unreasonable.

"Full statements were made concerning all cargoes in dispute and as one of the conditions for the release of the goods, I offered on behalf of the packers to limit future shipments to neutral countries near Germany after April 1 if England desired that such action be taken. Negotiations with the committee looking to a satisfactory adjustment outside of the prize court still are in progress."

U. S. Cruiser Denver Leaves British Ship in Mexico

SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 3.—With the British steamship Cetriana's commander detained ashore, the vessel's $200,000 cargo would have been confiscated by military authorities at Ensenada, Mexico, had it not been for defiance offered by the ship's first officer, J. A. Seaberg, of this city, and the intervention of the United States cruiser Denver, according to Seaberg's story told here today of the Cetriana's escape.

The vessel was towed into San Diego harbor by the Denver yesterday, her bunkers bare of coal and with neither food nor water aboard.

The Cetriana left Mazatlan for Ensenada and San Diego April 14, despite the fact that the Mazatlan custom officials had refused her clearance papers. When she arrived at Ensenada, Captain W. Kerr, according to Seaberg, was taken ashore by Mexican soldiers, placed in detention and requested to sign a statement turning over the Cetriana's cargo to the authorities.

Captain Kerr refused, Seaberg says, and a second squad of soldiers came aboard and took the ship's radio operator and purser ashore.

After this, according to Seaberg, a Mexican colonel boarded the Cetriana and stated he had received orders from the military commander of Lower California to unload the Cetriana's cargo.

Before the Mexican officer could return with more soldiers the cruisier Denver hove in sight.

"Commander Ziegemeier, of the Denver, after learning of the trouble went ashore, conferred with Ensenada officials and succeeded in having the men and vessel released," Seaberg said. "The Denver then passed us a line and towed us in."

CUD-CHEWING ANIMALS BARRED FROM PITTSBURG

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 3.—Camels, giraffes, llamas and other ruminants or cud-chewing animals will be barred from circuses appearing here this summer. Dr. George E. Totten, director of the United States bureau of animal industry, in a statement here yesterday, said animals of this class would not be admitted to Allegheny county while the quarantine resulting from the epidemic of the foot and mouth disease was in effect. He said, however, that the order would not affect lions, tigers, leopards, elephants or other animals classed as flesh or herb-eating animals.

NEGRO ADMITS KILLING FERRELL, POLICE CLAIM

Widely Known Southern Educator Slain at Alabama Mining Camp

(By Associated Press.)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 3.—Jesse White, a negro, arrested yesterday in connection with the killing of Chiles C. Ferrell, a wealthy coal operator and widely known author, made a statement today, according to police, in which he said he shot Dr. Ferrell after the latter had fired on him. White said, according to the authorities, that he and another negro were returning from Flat Creek and had stopped for a moment at the commissary building of the coal company, of which Dr. Ferrell was president, when Ferrell appeared with a revolver and began firing. He said he fired in reply and then fled, according to the police announcement.

Members of the Ferrell family told the police last night that Dr. Ferrell, whose home was near the commissary building, had been killed in a fight with burglars.

White denies that he attempted to rob the Ferrell home or any of the mining company's buildings. The negro who accompanied him also is under arrest.

Dr. Ferrell was born in 1850 in Greenville, S. C., and was educated at Vanderbilt university. He went abroad to study and received a philosopher's degree in the University of Leipsic, afterward studying at the University of Paris. After visiting nearly all Europe he returned to the United States, and for years was professor of modern languages at the University of Mississippi. Since 1908 he had been engaged in literary work until two years ago, when he accepted the presidency of the coal company and removed to Praco.

Dr. Ferrell married Miss Mae Tallafero, of Birmingham, and is survived by his widow and two children. He is closely related to a number of prominent southern families.

WOODMEN MAY HOLD 1917 CONVENTION HERE

Plans for Bringing National Convention to Atlanta Are Being Made Now

Plans for bringing the national convention of Woodmen of the World to Atlanta in July, 1917, are being worked out by Newton Phillips, state manager for the order, and committees representing the Woodmen, the Atlanta chamber of commerce and the Atlanta convention bureau.

The sovereign camp of the Woodmen, which is the national organization, holds biennial conventions. This year it meets July 12, in St. Paul, Minn., and the next convention will not occur until July, 1917. Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta convention bureau, will accompany the Georgia committees to St. Paul.

Between 1,000 and 1,500 delegates attend these annual conventions as well as several thousand visitors. There are about 25,000 Woodmen in Georgia who will co-operate in making the Atlanta convention the most notable and enjoyable ever held by the order.

At its recent meeting in Athens the head camp of Georgia indorsed the movement to get the 1917 convention for Atlanta and appointed a committee to work with that end in view.

ENGINEERS AND FIREMEN KICK ON WAGE AWARD

Increase Is $820,498 Yearly When About $10,000,000 Was Asked

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, May 3.—The Brotherhoods of Locomootive Engineers and Firemen, after analyzing for three days the arbitratin award in the wage dispute, issued a statement today in support of their contention that the wage advances granted were inadequate.

The increases aggregate, according to these figures, $820,498 a year. The figures are for wages alone and do not include the value of compensatory rules or overtime allowances granted. The railroads contended throughout the case that to grant every demand made by the men would cost the ninety-eight western railroads involved $40,000,000 a year. The men claim the cost would not run over $10,000,000 a year. The award is said to affect engineers on only 5,767 locomotives out of 22,812 in service. The advances to the engineers totals $31,116,46, according to the brotherhoods.

Firemen on 7,005 locomotives out of 22,681 in service receive a total increase of $569,236.70, it is calculated by the brotherhoods.

Fathers of the Famous.

One of those leisured and ingenious persons whom Shakespeare calls a "snapper-up of unconsidered trifles," has been at great pains to discover in what year of their fathers' lives famous men were born. He reports among the first fruits of his research that Confucius' father was seventy-one, Aristotle's fifty-eight, Benjamin Franklin's fifty-one, Washington's thirty-eight, Henry Ward Beecher's thirty-eight, John C. Calhoun's fifty-five, Aaron Burr's forty, Bismarck's forty-four, Edwin Booth's thirty-seven, Samuel Bowle's forty-seven, George Bancroft's forty-five, Balzac's fifty-five, Thomas Carlyle's thirty-eight, Salmon P. Chase's forty-five, Culver's fifty-one, W. M. Evarts' thirty-seven, Thomas A. Edison's forty-three, Jefferson Davis' fifty-two, Darwin's forty-three, Disraeli's thirty-nine, Goethe's thirty-nine, Oliver Goldsmith's thirty-eight, Washington Irving's fifty-two, Thomas Jefferson's thirty-five, Doctor Johnson's fifty-three, Lord Kelvin's thirty-eight, Krupp's forty-two, Robert E. Lee's fifty-one, Lincoln's thirty-one, James Russell Lowell's thirty-seven, Lord Macaulay's thirty-two, Gouverneur Morris' fifty-four, Newton's thirty-six, Admiral Nelson's thirty-six, Francis Parkman's thirty-eight, Wendell Phillips' forty-one, William Pitt's fifty-one, Pope's forty-seven, Sir Walter Raleigh's fifty-six, Solomon's fifty-two.

One may draw from this interesting record whatever conclusion he will. He may take it seriously, and evolve a new theory of eugenics; or lightly, and chuckle at the curious industry of the compiler. Due inquiry doubtless would show that the fathers of famous men were particularly fond of cream tarts; or, if the student had an aversion to that pastry, he could find an equally impressive mass of evidence to prove that the fathers of famous men abhorred cream tarts.

Facts, it has been said, rule the world. Just the contrary, facts are merely a lot of hail fellows well met, all things to all men. Or, perhaps, it were truer to say that facts are like the elephant which the three blind men happened upon one day. The blind man who felt the elephants' squirming trunk was sure he had found a huge snake; the one who felt its ivory tusks was convinced that he held a spear; while the one who tugged at its leg swore he had hold of a tree. The most interesting of all facts is that we sense only a phase of any fact. That is the case whether we consider a grain of sand or the solar system, whether we ponder the mysteries of life and death or the predilections of the fathers of famous sons for cream tarts.

The youth who flies high doesn't stop to worry about where he's going to light.

Little Things to Large Account.

From little fishes mighty fortunes grow. Of the twenty-nine million dollars' worth of sea food canned or otherwise preserved in this country each year, more than twenty per cent is made up of sardines; and one of the essentials of this thriving industry is an oil produced from what was treated not many years ago as a worthless residue of the South's cotton crop. "Thousands of persons," says the Manufacturers Record, "who enjoy the appetizing American sardines are unaware that the oil in which they are packed is not olive oil, but one of the valuable and healthful products of what cotton ginners once regarded as a nuisance and a waste." The Record interestingly adds:

> "The oil surrounding the sardines in their American cans is but one of the telling evidences of the effect of application of chemical science to the once-despised surplus cotton-seed, an effect summed up at the recent meeting of the American Chemical Society at New Orleans as putting about $125,000,000 additional into the hands of Southern cotton growers in a normal year, or, in other words, adding from $10 to $12 to the value of every bale of cotton grown, and at the same time making possible a manufacturing industry with an annual output valued, as to its primary products alone, at not less than $150,000,000 and employing directly 18,000 persons."

It is the peculiar mission of science to discover wealth in neglected places and to turn little things to large account. What chemistry has accomplished for the cotton industry, chemistry and other branches of science are steadily accomplishing in divers fields of agricultural and industrial affairs. We are accustomed to quote "Knowledge is power," and then forget that the saying is of practical and ever-renewed significance.

One get-out-and-hustle man is better than a dozen of the sit-and-wait-for-it-to-turn-up brand.

He's a wise prophet who can induce others to forget his predictions.

The Federal Reserve Report.

Because of its national scope, the report just issued by the Federal Reserve Board concerning business conditions and prospects is especially significant. Improvements in this or that community are continually being announced, but the Reserve Board's statement is a digest of developments throughout the Union.

Each of the twelve cities where a reserve bank is located is the business center of its outlying region and reflects the condition of its entire territory. It is on official reports from these cities that the Federal Reserve Board bases its interesting conclusions. Improvements are more pronounced at some centers than at others, but the important fact is that substantial measure of improvement is noted everywhere. The revival of industry and trade is not confined to any one section; it is nation-wide.

In New England the advance is apparently slower than elsewhere but it is none the less evident. In the New York district, there is unmistakable optimism, and in Philadelphia the processes of recovery are well under way.

The South is moving swiftly forward as is shown by the cheering reports from Richmond, Atlanta and Dallas. "Improving conditions and promise of continued betterment," is the word from Richmond. "Increased activity of sound and conservative nature in all lines," is the summary from Atlanta. "The feeling through the entire business, agricultural and live stock section is encouraging," says Dallas.

So, from St. Louis, Kansas City, Cleveland, Chicago, Minneapolis and San Francisco, the reports without exception are cheering. There is no disposition to over-estimate the forward tendencies, on the contrary there is a tone of conservatism in all the reports. But the prevailing note is confidence and deep-rooted assurance.

As a matter of fact, there's very little common sense in the world—most of it is uncommon.

Uncertainties in Mexico.

From Washington dispatches it is clear that our Government will not recognize any of the Mexican factions until the affairs of that country are on a far more certain basis. Secretary Bryan is quoted as saying that the subject of recognition has not even been formally proposed, though it is understood that Carranza has submitted a program of his intentions. The United States is eager to give all reasonable aid in restoring peace and order to its unfortunate neighbor, but it will be slow in extending diplomatic sanction.

None of the warring factions has yet proved itself capable of control. Villa, who once appeared to be the strongest personality in the field, has suffered heavy reverses, and only by some rare stroke of prowess or fortune can he recover his lost ground. Zapata's following seems limited to loosely knit bands of adventurers, and he himself gives no token of broad leadership. Carranza, the head of the dismembered Constitutionalist party, has had experience in civic affairs and, with proper support, might succeed in establishing something like a dependable government. But he is so notionate and testy that even his closest adherents are doubtful of what he may do in an hour of trial.

No Mexican so far has shown himself equal to the country's problems, and no group has won decisive military advantage. In these circumstances, the United States can only wait upon developments. The fact is, of course, that official recognition will not be extended to any regime which is not legally established by the will of a majority of the people. It was on that principle that Huerta was not recognized, our Government making it clear at the time that it would countenance no adventurer who bought personal power at the expense of constitutional safeguards and popular rights.

Editorial Echoes

If you were a Japanese wouldn't you feel that there was a very real 'white peril?' In view of what the white nations had done to China wouldn't you feel some suspicion of their unselfish designs? Dr. Shailer Mathews of Chicago, returning from a visit to Japan, is assured of the peaceable intent of the Japanese government. What he is asking of Americans is to put themselves in the place of the Japanese and try to get their viewpoint. It would be an international tragedy if two nations should become increasingly suspicious of each other to the breaking point, without any substantial ground for their suspicions.—Kansas City Times.

Mr. Huerta has warned us in his suave way against any interference on our part with Mexico. We have no thought of interfering, but if we had, Mr. Huerta's warning would be quite unavailing. He has done his share to increase the burdens of the Mexican people, to make their national problems harder to solve. He should now bear in mind that a misuse of the harbor of refuge accorded to exiled Mexicans in this country will be attended by many dangers. We can no longer doubt that his sudden appearance here, at the time of great activities among the clentifico and conservative juntas of our Southwestern states is not devoid of political significance. —New York Times.

German submarine sailors are not to blame. The German sailor goes where the German admiralty directs. To punish him, when a prisoner, other than a prisoner of war, is abominable. When the German army retaliates, the British statesmen bellow like stuck pigs. If the German submarine warfare is outlaw, it is the German government, not the German sailor, who is to blame. England made a spectacle of herself when she began the extraordinary punishment of German submarine prisoners.—Augusta Chronicle.

American Vitality Once More.

A YEAR or two ago, a great deal of attention was being directed to the subject of an alleged decline of American vitality. Statistics were assembled, showing that while the death-rate in the population as a whole was steadily diminishing, the death-rate at ages above forty-five was actually increasing; and the conclusion was drawn that, while a reduction of infant mortality, and of deaths from zymotic diseases, had been brought about by efforts directed to these ends, there must be a deterioration in American conditions of life or ways of living, to account for the increase of mortality from the ordinary organic diseases of middle life. Nor could this conclusion be combatted by the simple remark that people have to die some time, and that if a greater proportion of the population was to be found in the more advanced ages, a greater proportion of the total of deaths would be found in those ages; for the statistics showed that, taking any of these later age-groups by itself—say the group of people between forty-five and fifty—the death-rate within the group was greater than it had formerly been.

Nevertheless, as we pointed out at the time, the conclusion—though it might possibly be true—was not justified by the statistics cited. The points we made against it were essentially two: First, that an increase in the death-rate above forty-five may be due "not to worse conditions destroying some lives which in the older time would have continued longer, but on the contrary to the survival for many years of some lives less hardy than the average, which in the earlier days would have disappeared much sooner." Secondly, the death-rate in a given age-group is affected not only by changes in conditions, but by changes in the composition of the group. When these considerations are borne in mind, it is difficult to see how any careful thinker can assert with confidence that there has been any decline whatever in American vitality, in the sense in which the words are currently understood and used. And in point of fact, we believe that a more moderate and cautious note has been customary of late on this subject among the spokesmen of the "Life Extension" movement. This is true, at all events, of the two papers—one on "The Trend of American Vitality," by Dr. Louis I. Dublin, the other on "Periodic Health Examinations," by Dr. Eugene L. Fisk—read at the recent meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and printed in the April number of the Popular Science Monthly.

Not that the position itself has been abandoned, or even explicitly modified; only that the emphasis has, it seems to us, been considerably shifted. And in Dr. Dublin's paper there is, as to the facts themselves, a portion which is of peculiar interest from our point of view. "In a recent paper," says Dr. Dublin, "the writer pointed out some of the conditions of present-day life which he believed tended to increase the death-rates from the so-called 'degenerative' diseases." What he referred to particularly in that paper was "the greater use of alcoholic drinks" and "the deleterious effects of modern conditions of industry." "In the present paper," he continues, "I wish to refer to another element which is apparently at work in the causation of these higher death-rates from the diseases above mentioned." This other element consists in "important changes in the composition and characteristics of the population." And he goes on to set forth with great emphasis the necessary tendency of a large influx of immigrants from countries where the mortality rates are much higher than in our own, to swell the mortality figures here; adding to this a priori constitutes actual census figures which show not only far higher death-rates, but far higher liability to the degenerative diseases, among the foreign-born than among the native population.

Now, is it not surprising that a statistician of Dr. Dublin's ability should think of all this as simply "another element which is apparently at work," alongside the deteriorating conditions of American life which he had previously noted? Is it not clear that the presence of this "other element" makes it imperative to revise the whole conclusion previously arrived at? If, to be sure the figures of increase of mortality were of sufficient magnitude, it might be said, offhand, that the immigration factor was too small to explain them, or even to need to be taken seriously into account. But what are the figures? In the age-group forty-five to fifty-four, for the registration states (we take the figures as Dr. Dublin gives them) the death-rate increased from 15.8 per 1,000 in 1900 to 16.1 in 1911—that is, among ten thousand persons there were three more deaths in 1911 than in 1900. Is it quite certain that the change due to immigration was not sufficient to account for this? In the age-group fifty-five to seventy-four, the increase was greater, but even there only two more deaths occurred among a thousand persons. And for the group consisting of persons of seventy-five years and upward, the increase was only thirteen in every ten thousand.

Is it not assuming a great deal to suppose, without statistical examination, that these moderate increases are sufficient to cover the results of the influx of immigrants from Southern Europe, and leave over a considerable excess to be accounted for by deterioration of conditions here at home? The question is of real and practical importance; for on the answer to it, and to similar questions, depends the legitimacy of many an appeal addressed to us in the name of "American vitality." For our own part, we see no reason whatever to believe that the combined effect of the two factors above mentioned—the factor of survival and the factor of changing composition—is insufficient to account for the increased mortality recorded in middle and advanced life. On the contrary, we think it highly probable that they more than account for the increase, —leaving a substantial balance over to the credit of improved conditions and better ways of living—New York Evening Post.

Train Your Observation.

BY H. ADDINGTON BRUCE.

(Author of "The Riddle of Personality" "Psychology and Parenthood," etc.)

Friend, do you appreciate that one of the greatest drawbacks to efficiency in any business or profession is inability to observe things with accuracy?

Are you aware that, as a matter of fact, few people make as full use of their eyes as Nature intended them to do, and are mentally blind to many of the objects on which their gaze falls?

And they are needlessly blind.

While it is undoubtedly true that people are born with varying degrees of observational power, it is equally certain that everybody can by training utilize his natural endowment to an extent undreamed by most persons.

A striking proof of what training can do in this respect is found in the case of the Houdins, the celebrated conjurers.

One of their most impressive feats—alleged "mind reading"—depended for its success on the rapidity and accuracy with which a large number of objects could be observed. This is the way they prepared for it:

The elder Houdin first put down a single domino, and asked his son to name the total number of spots on it without counting them. Then two dominoes were used, then three, then four, and so on.

After a time both father and son found it possible, at one glance, to name correctly the number of points on as many as twelve dominoes.

Meanwhile they further developed their observational ability by another means.

Every day they made it a practice, when walking along the street, to cast an attentive glance into some store window containing a great variety of objects. One glance was all they gave after which, walking out of sight of the window, they would write down on a pad all they had seen. Then they would return to the store to verify their enumeration.

Unbelievable as it may seem, at the end of a month the younger Houdin was able to observe forty different objects at a single glance, and his father thirty.

Something of the same sort might well be done by all of us, and it is especially to be recommended to parents as an aid in the education of their children. It is because training of the observational power is neglected in early life that so many people are deficient in this important faculty.

But it is never too late to begin to make amends, and conscientious use of some device similar to that practiced by the Houdins will be found of great developmental value.

THE ALASKAN OPPORTUNITY

IV.—FORESTS.

By Frederic J. Haskin

IT WILL probably be a surprise to most Americans to learn that lumber was shipped from Alaska to the states last year. Alaska's mines are celebrated, her fisheries have been thoroughly journalized and people are beginning to realize that part of Alaska is a farming country; but her forests are almost unknown.

The few shiploads of lumber that left Alaska last year, however, do not portend any large export trade in this commodity. The interesting fact at present is that Alaska contains enough timber to build all of her own railroads and open her coal mines and erect her cities. One-seventh of all the timber on our national forests is contained in the two Alaska reservations, the Chugach and the Tongass. These two forests contain seventy-eight billion feet of timber and are capable of supplying seven hundred million board feet annually for all time.

For the past few years the cut of Alaskan timber has averaged about fifty million board feet, used in local building, mining and to erect canneries and make salmon crates. Nearly all of the work has been done by relatively small mills. But every step in the coming development of Alaska will require timber. This is one industry that must grow if any other does.

The Alaskan forests are like no others in the world. Most of Alaska is too high and two cold for forest growth. But along the southern and western coasts there is a low, warm belt where over 100 inches of rain falls every year. Here, beginning at the water's edge and extending inland not over half a mile, grow some of the oldest and densest forests on the continent. Sitka spruce, western hemlock, and red cedar are the principal species. The trees are as much as six feet in diameter and 150 feet tall. They have never been cut, and forest fires are unknown, for these Alaskan forests are fire-proof. Under the trees is a growth of moss and brush so dense that one may walk for miles without setting foot upon bare soil. All of this undergrowth is one immense sponge, filled with water which wells up at every step. Fire is impossible.

The southern and western coasts of Alaska are cut by innumerable bays and inlets fringed with islands. It is this coastal country upon which the forests are located. Thus the Tongass, although only 350 miles in length, contains about 12,000 miles of coast line. These are the only national forests in the United States which are patrolled wholly by boat. Practically all of the timber lies within half a mile of the water and the rangers do their work in thirty-five foot motor boats. Five of these vessels are kept constantly busy. Storms often make the work extremely difficult, but to patrol the forests ashore is out of the question, not only because of the distance but also because of the mosquitoes and the bears, which represent the extremes in size of the Alaskan fauna, and are the terrors of the coastal country.

When they want to jail a man at one of the mining camps in that region of Alaska during the summer, they strip him and put him in a mosquito tent, then leave him alone. No guard with a rifle would be surer death than the clouds of mosquitoes without. As for the bears, they are incredibly numerous and absolutely lacking in education. They have not yet learned that modern repeating rifles are sudden death, and when they meet a man in the woods, the great Alaskan brown bear, especially, are prone to argue the right of way. By sticking to the Alaskan forest ranger avoids both mosquitoes and bears.

Lumbering operations on these Alaskan forests are singularly easy and are unique in method. These forests have been standing for centuries, uncabed by ax or fire, and the Forest Service is anxious to have the mature trees removed. They are sold to the lumbermen for about one dollar per thousand board feet on the stump. The forests rise directly right out of the sea. The lumberman mounts a little donkey engine upon a raft, floats it to a convenient beach and there sets it up for operation. A steel cable is carried a thousand feet or more up into the woods where the best timber is cut. Then it is wound on a revolving drum and the great logs are "snaked" to the water's edge in double-quick time. They are then floated in great rafts to the mills at Seward and other coastal points. Nowhere else in the world, perhaps, can timber be so easily brought to the mill. For many years, before any machinery was brought to Alaska, the pioneers got all the timber they wanted by cutting the great trees on steep slopes and rolling and sliding them down to the sea with jackscrews.

Between Prince William Sound and Seward there is an immense supply of timber which is suitable for railroad construction purposes. The Matanuska coal field to which the government railroad will include a spur is within forty miles of the Tongass National Forest. Thus an adequate supply of construction lumber is assured, both for the railroad building and the opening of the coal mines.

This Alaskan timber is not of the first quality, but it has proved a sufficiently good building material for all practical purposes. The western hemlock is the best of the species and has shown great endurance as piling and flooring for wharves. The Sitka spruce is very knotty and coarse grained, but nevertheless has given good service in many parts of Alaska.

When the two national forests in Alaska were set aside the intention was to include in them all of the best timber. There are, however, considerable areas of forest between the two reservations along the coast and far inland along the Yukon and Kuskokwim valleys. The soil in these valleys is very rich and favorable to forest growth, and the trees stand thicker wherever there is a southern or western exposure, but they are too small to be of great commercial value. White spruce is the best species found in these northern forests. It seldom attains more than eighteen inches in diameter, while most of the trees measure less than a foot. Nevertheless, these northern forests furnished the timber for many of Alaska's mines in the early days of the gold rush. In that exciting time there were actually saw mills in operation inside the Arctic circle.

In addition to the immediate stimulus which will be given to the lumber industry of Alaska by the building of the government railroad and the opening of the coal fields, members of the Forest Service are confident that Alaska has a great future in the pulp and paper industry. An expert on this subject was recently sent to Alaska by the Forest Service, and although his report has not been published, it is known that he found the conditions almost ideal for the building up of such an industry. The Alaskan timber species will make as good news print as any. There are immense areas of timber at the higher levels which will never attain sufficient size to be sawn, but which is ideal for making pulp and paper. Also, all of the timber is at the very edge of the water, so that it can be easily transported to the mills, and from the mills to the market.

Besides all of these advantages, there is one other which has not been thoroughly investigated, but may confidently be counted upon. That is water power. The Alaskan streams rushing down these steep slopes to the sea will almost undoubtedly furnish the power to operate the pulp and paper mills. Precisely what this power amounts to is a matter which the Forest Service and the Geological Survey have combined to investigate during the coming summer. They will place gauges in a number of the streams and by a long series of observations will learn exactly what they are worth for power.

This pulp and paper industry is undoubtedly one which will not even begin to be developed for some years. Government officials, however, confidently predict that not only the United States, but especially the Oriental market, will at one time be supplied from Alaskan paper mills. The extensive investigations which the government is making are in preparation for these developments may be anticipated. Uncle Sam's forecasts are made along scientific lines and they are nearly always right.

The most promising thing about Alaska's future lumber supply is that the Forest Service gained control of it before its exploitation had even begun. The splendid forests of the rest of the United States were badly destroyed before the federal government took charge. The Alaskan forests are to be thoroughly utilized for the development of the country, but they are to be utilized under scientific management and without waste or permanent damage to them.

SEEKING PUBLICITY

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

DOWN in the University of Pennsylvania there is a live man; he is called Professor Scott Nearing. There is one thing the matter with him, however—his head is not bald, neither is it an osseous globe filled with oatmeal. In other words, he has brains.

He not only has a brain, but he has something on it. And when a man has something on the brain he is pretty sure sooner or later to get mixed up in a disturbance with the Philistines.

It has happened to Nearing.

It seems that one Joseph Wharton endowed the economic department of the university with a large mass of money, urging at the same time that there should be taught faithfully the doctrine of protective tariff.

Nearing didn't seem to see it that way, being a victim of the dangerous habit of cerebration.

A committee therefore the other day reported to the board of directors and mentioned "one discordant note" in the school, a "tendency on the part of a certain element of the teaching staff to seek publicity by discussion of various conclusions based upon a biassed attitude of mind."

It was not Wharton and his dead lump of money that was biassed; it was Nearing who was alive and whose think-works were functioning.

The committee recommended that some safe men, like Mr. Taft, Mr. Root, and Mr. Knox be invited to come in and talk to the students, as an antidote to the threatened Nearingitis.

The public, in reviewing this incident, observes aptly that "it is fortunate for the mathematical department of the university that no one has given it money conditioned on the teaching that two and two make five, and for the department of astronomy that no millionaire wants the Ptolemaic theory taught there as truth."

The sneer at Professor Nearing as a "publicity seeker" is characteristic.

You have noticed that when a preacher develops symptoms of becoming a human being, and gives signs of possessing a conscience, the trustees of the church, led by the soap millionaire and the bank cashier, beat it. Publicity! Publicity! and behind him the fear of his can't stick to Mesopotamia and let the street railway boss alone he'd better look for another job.

The congressman or senator who insinuates that fundamental political conditions are wrong is a seeker for notoriety. Yet somehow nobody accused Cannon, Aldrich, and Root of seeking notoriety, although they got a good deal of it.

If you want to get on in this world come in, stop thinking for yourself, join the party, and don't be too curious about where the money comes from.

Unless you want to be branded as a seeker for publicity you must stand for property against men, custom against reason, ancient humbug against intelligence, the dead against the living.

Professors, teachers, editors, statesmen, all speakers of opinion, have a care!

Who's putting up the money, anyhow, for your school, your paper, your campaign, your church? You'd better come around and talk things over at the bank before you get too independent.

KEEP DOWN THE COTTON ACREAGE

(From Southern Farming of Atlanta, Ga., May 1, 1915.)

Cotton is now selling right here in our own state at 10 cents, with an upward tendency. On the exchanges of the world, the prices for delivery next December and over the year end are still higher. Does not this indicate that the cotton crop of 1915, even if there is a full production throughout the world may be worth 10 to 12 cents at the gin? If this is so, are we not foolish to plant at least the usual full acreage, should it seem to mean a reduction in the acreage if the crop is going to be worth 10 or 15 cents?—L. H. B., Georgia.

Demand has forced prices of cotton at this time to 10 cents or better. At the close of the depression last autumn, we gave the reasons why the present results should come about, just as we also foretold in September last "Why Business Must Be Good" ere this date. War conditions decreased the consumption of cotton abroad for normal manufacturing purposes, but this decrease is more than offset by the larger consumption of the lower grades of cotton in the manufacturing of high explosives for war purposes. The longer the war continues, the longer will this extraordinary demand be.

However, present prices and future quotations are based not only upon demand for both normal and abnormal purposes, but also upon supply. Buyers have figured that the acreage planted to cotton in 1915 would be anywhere from 15 to 40 per cent below last year's acreage. The sale of fertilizers for cotton planting appears to have been from 25 to 50 per cent less than usual up to April 20, and it would seem to be almost too late to increase the supply of fertilizers for an enlarged area in cotton.

But it is true that advancing prices since March 1 have tempted many farmers to plant a crop on a larger area than they had expected to do. Southern Farming of Atlanta believes it unwise to do this. We adhere firmly to the view that each grower should plant not more than half the number of acres he had cultivated last year. The extent to which this advice is followed may profoundly influence prices. Last year about 37,000,000 acres were planted to cotton in the United States. Should it soon be proven that the area this year is going to be as large, that fact will depend upon a single effort on the market. On the other hand, the extent to which the area is reduced, should have an elevating influence on prices. The extent to which either of these influences may be affected by the continuance or stoppage of the war, remains to be seen.

When the war quits, the consumption of cotton for war purposes will quit. Whether the demand for cotton for normal purposes will then increase enough to offset the decline in war uses, is another grave problem upon which there are opposing views.

However consumption may be affected in future certain it is that if the area planted to cotton in 1915 is say one-third less than last year, the price of the 1915 crop will be improved. Southern Farming's own judgment is that even a big yield on one-third less acres will be more profitable to each and every planter than the same or a larger yield on a greater number of acres. Should unfavorable climatic conditions reduce the yield per acre on the smaller area, the grower's profit should be correspondingly larger. On the other hand, a full crop on a full acreage is so likely to result in lower prices, present and prospective, that it should not be considered for a moment.

GERMAN AEROPLANE FIRED ON BY GUNS AT DOVER

Two English Cities Visited by Aviator From Ostend

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 3.—A German aeroplane, coming from the direction of Ostend, scouted over Dover and Folkestone at noon today. It was driven off by gun fire.

It is reported that a Zeppelin airship is traveling in the direction of England from the island of Vlieland, which is on the northern coast of the Netherlands. The airship passed over this island at 10 o'clock this morning.

"Northeast of Skiernlewice the Russians also suffered a heavy defeat in which they lost a great number in killed and 100 men taken prisoners.

"In the southeastern theater in the presence of the Austrian commander-in-chief, Field Marshal Archduke Frederick, and under the leadership of General Count von Mackensen, the allied troops yesterday, after bitter fighting, pierced everywhere and crushed the entire front in West Galicia, from the neighborhood of the Hungarian frontier to the junction of the Dunajec river with the Vistula.

"Such of the enemy that succeeded in escaping are in hasty retreat, closely pursued by the allied troops. The trophies of the victory cannot yet even be approximately estimated."

Germans Active in Flanders Again With Gas Bombs

PARIS, May 3.—The French war office statement this afternoon says:

"The Germans yesterday made two attacks with asphyxiating gases. One was to the north of Ypres, near St. Julien, and the other was to the south of Ypres, near Hill No. 60. Neither one accomplished anything.

"There is nothing to report from the rest of the front."

Turks Report Victory Over British Force at Gallipoli

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 3.—The week end has been marked by relatively mild activity in the North sea and the resumption of the submarine blockade by German craft which have destroyed or damaged three vessels off the Scilly islands, one of the victims being the American oil tank steamer Gulflight.

No further official announcements have been made concerning the Dardanelles fighting, but unofficial dispatches agree that the Allies are progressing toward the narrows under cover of the fire of their naval guns which are inflicting great damage on the Turkish defenses, including the reported total destruction of the town of Dardanelles.

Late Turkish official announcement claims a victory near Gapa Tepeh in the Gallipoli peninsula, by which is said to have resulted in the retreat of the Colonial British troops to the shelter of their warships. This account, however, does not agree with the British official report published Saturday, which declared the British were resuming the offensive after a stubborn resistance on the part of the Turks.

Petrograd continues to assert that the German advance toward Riga is only a raid, but an uneasy feeling is growing in London that these attacks are in force sufficiently strong seriously to threaten Russian communications.

Other sectors on the eastern front record only minor engagements while the western battle lines evidently are taking a breathing spell after the strenuous activity of the last fortnight.

New German Attacks Are Repulsed, British Say

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, May 3.—A British official statement today says:

"At 7 p. m. May 1, the Germans attacked Hill No. 60, southeast of Ypres, and yesterday evening they attacked in the neighborhood of St. Julien. These attacks were both repulsed. We lost no ground and we inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy in spite of the fact that he again used poisonous gases emitted both from tubes in the trenches and from especially manufactured shells.

"A German aeroplane yesterday afternoon was chased by one of our machines to within rifle range of our trenches, and then brought down by our fire.

Two Allied Battleships Damaged, Say Turks

(By Associated Press.)

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 3.—(Via Amsterdam and London).—The Turkish war department today gave out the following official statement:

"In consequence of the attacks proceeding successfully for us the enemy has not succeeded in improving his position on the coast of the Gallipoli peninsula. The fire of our batteries directed against the enemy at Seddul Bahr shows good results."

The statement claims that the French battleship Henry IV and the British battleship Vengeance have been damaged by shells from the guns of the Turkish forts, and it says that the Russian Black sea fleet demonstrated for a hour off the Bosphorus and then retired rapidly in a northerly direction.

Later they returned to Luxembourg.

The local newspapers were forbidden to mention this visit until such time as the emperor was back in Luxemburg. The few persons who recognized his majesty say he looked well, but aged.

THOMAS COUNTY MAKES PLANS FOR FAIR IN FALL

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 3.—That Thomas county will again have a fair this fall and the best one in the history of the association, was the opinion expressed by the directors at a meeting held here Saturday. It was thought last year when business conditions were rather unfavorable that the fair might prove a failure, but instead it was better than the year before and it is the sense of those at the head of it that the one this year will surpass all others. Premium lists and other arrangements will be gone into soon and the people of this section will again be given a chance to show what they can do.

"Comic Opera Affair" Says Russia of Kaiser's New Move

(By Associated Press.)

PETROGRAD May 3.—(Via London.) The spectacular advance of German forces along a hundred mile front extending from the Baltic sea near Libau in a southeasterly direction to the northern direction to the northern tributaries of the Nieman continues unchecked. It has not disturbed Russian activity in the region south of the Niemen, where, according to information received here, consist successes are being won by the troops of Emperor Nicholas.

The German movement, designed to sever communication with Libau and thus cripple the Russian right wing, is not regarded seriously by the Russians, for the holding of the Niemen entirely separates the Germans from their base and other German armies. The two fields of operations, one on each side of the river, therefore are as isolated from each other as though they were 1,000 miles apart, although actually they are adjacent.

Russian observers characterize the German advance north of the Niemen as a "comic opera affair," designed to induce the Russians hurriedly to transfer troops to that region.

At points to the southward, particularly Ostrolenka, Sarafin, Edinovritz and the whole region between the rivers Skwa and Pissa, the German offensive has assumed a more formidable character. It is marked by intense and prolonged artillery fire. On Friday the Germans fired thirty thousand shells in that district. Infantry battles followed in which the Germans, after suffering heavy losses, reached the Russian trenches, only to be finally repulsed.

BILL STODDARD, dressed in his fancy costume in which he paraded Atlanta streets Saturday.

Bill Stoddard Held For Parading Monkey Without City Permit

And now, having danced down Peachtree street in rainbow regalia, "Bill" Stoddard must pay the piper even as his friend, Mark Nabors, paid the city $5.75 for winning the bet which caused Mr. Stoddard to dance.

"What's this! what's this!" exclaimed City Clerk Walter Taylor Friday when he picked up the paper. He read how Mark Nabors bet Bill Stoddard he could drive his auto along a Peachtree sidewalk. He read how Mark Nabors won. He read how Mark Nabors paid a fine for so doing. And then he read how "Bill" Stoddard paid the bet by parading Saturday in Palm beach, silk hat, etc.

But this was the line which caught City Clerk Taylor's eye: "Mr. Stoddard was accompanied in his march by an Italian organ grinder playing 'The Campbell's Are Coming.'"

"Pish! Tush!" said City Clerk Taylor, "this will never do with us. I don't ever remember granting Bill Stoddard an organ grinder's license. Evidently he is trying to avoid paying that $2.50 a week. We must protect these poor Italians from interlopers."

He looked up the records, but could find none licensing Mr. Stoddard to grind an organ. And so he swore out a copy of charges against Mr. Stoddard and had License Inspector C. L. Woodall serve them. And Mr Stoddard will appear before Recorder Johnson Tuesday afternoon to answer to such charges.

Verily, the way of the freak better is hard.

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Plans for a series of general hearings on labor and industrial problems, involving those of a number of large corporations and organizations, were completed today by the United States commission on industrial relations. The first will be opened tomorrow when an inquiry into questions of wages and employment of sleeping car employes will be resumed with officials of the Pullman company under examination.

Eminent authorities on these questions from throughout the country will testify.

A review of the Colorado strike and its attendant problems will be resumed by the commission beginning May 17. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will be asked to testify.

The commission expects to find time before the investigations are concluded to resume hearings into the complaints of the order of Railway Telegraphers against the Pennsylvania railroad, the labor conditions in Porto Rico and the Pennsylvania state constabulary.

FEDERAL PRISON INMATES LIKE THE NEW WARDEN

"Good Words," Prison Paper, Gives High Praise to Fred G. Zerbst

Much "good time" lost by prisoners at the federal penitentiary during the olden days, has been restored to the prisoners by the new warden, Fred G. Zerbst.

As a result "Good Words," the prison paper, is all praise for the official in its May issue, published just one month after he assumed charge of the institution.

Discussing the plans of the new warden, who, like his predecessor, W. H. Moyer, advocates compensation for prison labor, "Good Words" says:

"The warden proposes to increase the equipment and efficiency of our shops and to employ them more as trade schools for the instruction of the men. By an energetic and systematic application of this plan the men will be taught industry and skill and will be equipped to successfully and honorably enter the larger world when released. This policy will also be highly conducive to preventing men of previous lawless lives from returning to those activities on which society frowns. He also plans to employ more men in agriculture and thereby increase the productivity of our farm. This will not only keep more of the men in the open but will enable our steward to materially vary the monotony of our diet and provide our table with a greater variety of garden produce in season. Warden Zerbst's aim is to employ all enlightened means to reduce the population of this and other penal institutions and to eliminate, to the greatest possible extent, that black indictment of society, the recidivist. Another step in advance, advocated by the warden and which will do much to eliminate the recidivist, is compensation for prison labor. The warden believes that this should be a generous compensation, not at the expense of the taxpayer but based upon the real earning power of the men and that the major part of it should be paid regularly to the men's dependents. May we all endeavor, by good conduct and team work, to hasten the consummation of these most desirable ends."

MISS ANNIE WHITEHEAD H. P. WHITEHEAD'S BRIDE

Augusta Girl and Birmingham Man Meet Here and Are Married

Friends of Miss Annie Whitehead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Whitehead, of Augusta, Ga., were surprised Monday to learn that she had changed the "Miss" to "Mistress," although her last name is still Whitehead. The wedding was married Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock to H. P. Whitehead, of Birmingham, Ala.

Last week the two young people, corresponding with each other, decided not to put off their marriage any longer, and so arranged to meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Lesesne, friends of the bride, in Oakhurst, near Atlanta. There the ceremony was performed by Rev. H. H. Jones, and Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead left immediately afterward for Birmingham, where they will make their home at 1919 South Fifteenth street.

TWO BOYS TO RIDE TO N. Y. ON MOTORCYCLE

Wednesday morning "Daredevil" Berry Cohen and Joe Shapiro, a young prize fighter known over the south as "Battling Superior," will start on a motorcycle trip to New York City. Both boys will ride on one machine.

These boys have a big following among the motorcycle fans of Atlanta, who will watch their venture with much interest. Cohen is the man who captured third prize in the recent 200-mile endurance race between Birmingham and Atlanta.

Their trip to Gotham will be over the National highway and they will remain in the northern metropolis for some time. They expect to negotiate the 1,100 miles in about three days, thereby making a record run.

ALLEGED STOLEN AUTO IS CAUGHT AFTER CHASE

Commandeering a passing automobile, Officers Harper and Daily Sunday afternoon had a speedy chase after the allegedly stolen machine of Dr. M. John Henry, colored, was held under a charge of larceny and the other three young negroes were held on disorderly conducts charges. Dr. Klansman's machine was stolen, he said, while he was in the Atlanta National Bank building Sunday afternoon.

Sands Wins Praise For Way He Handled Big Opera Crowds

Operagoers of the past week found that the great throngs which crowded into the autditorium were handled with far less confusion than might have been expected, when it is remembered that from 4,000 to 5000 persons were admitted and seated at each performance within thirty minutes. There have been many favorable comments upon the work of "Billy" Sands, head of the door-keeping staff, and his assistants.

It is no small task to admit audiences of such magnitude, see that the tickets are for the proper performance, and avoid delay and confusion. But Mr. Sands, who has been "on the door" at various theatrical and other amusement enterprises for many years, handled the crowds in admirable manner. Both his staff and the ushers, chosen by Custodian Homer Weaver, did excellent work, and to their efforts is largely due the success of the opera season.

CONFESSED BIGAMIST WINS FIGHT IN COURT

Appellate Court Holds J. B. Graeber Should Have Been Tried in Florida

A man may marry in Georgia and wed again in another state without being subject to trial for bigamy in Georgia, according to a decision of the court of appeals handed down Monday.

J. B. Braeber, according to the decision, married a woman in Georgia and wed another woman in Florida. He pleaded guilty to a bigamy charge in the superior court in Georgia and was sentenced. He then appealed to the judge of the city court of Leesburg for a writ of habeas corpus against Warden J. M. McBride, of the detention camp. The writ was granted. Warden McBride appealed to the court of appeals.

The court of appeals holds not only that a man cannot be tried in Georgia for the crime committed in Florida, but that the city court may grant the writ of habeas corpus with the same power as the superior court.

SONG BIRDS OF OPERA FLIT TO OTHER FIELDS

Stars Say Au Revoir to Atlanta After One of Best Seasons City Ever Had

Down at the auditorium a force is clearing away the debris behind the scenes, collecting lost hatpins and fans and restoring the grand organ console to its accustomed place on the now empty stage. Opera is over, and not for another year will the crimson curtain hang in the proscenium.

The last of the Metropolitan company has gone. Most of them departed on the special trains after the Saturday night performance and are in New York today, telling their friends what a great city is this Atlanta, and recounting the good time they had. Those who didn't take the special left on later trains Sunday.

There was not the usual exodus to Europe this year. A few of the Italians went home, but the Germans and French remain in America for the summer. Miss Farrar is going west to act in the movies. Scotti also has a movie engagement. The orchestra is going on a brief concert tour, and many of the singers have concert engagements for practically all summer.

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, general manager, with F. C. Coppicus, his assistant, and William J. Guard, press agent and diplomat, will sail in a few days for Milan, to hear a few new voices, see what Italy has to offer in singers and operas, and perhaps make a few new contracts. The official statement of plans for next season, singers engaged, operas to be given, and other details, will be given out by Mr. Gatti-Casazza in a few days.

Crackers Meet Barons at Ponce de Leon Today; Won Last From Pelicans

Infield Errors Ruin the Pels

Bluhm and Thomas Crack Badly in Last Game With Smithmen -- Hiett Hurls Steady Ball

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—The Pelicans looked like anything but pennant contenders in the last game of the series with the Crackers here yesterday, and Bill Smith's team had little trouble in getting away with the big end of the score. The proportion was 4 to 1.

Infield errors were in a large measure responsible for the downfall of the Pelicans. Red Bluhm, who ordinarily looks and acts like one of the best fielding first basemen in the minor league circles, was badly off form, while Thomas, too, was having the worse day he has shown since joining the local club. Besides these two, Tim Hendrix kicked in with one misplay in center. Flick had a single bobble and Bob Higgins also erred on one of his eight chances.

Errors were in a considerable measure responsible for the Crackers' runs, but at that Hiett, who did the hurling for the visitors, was steady at all times, and saw to it that the Pelicans were resisted stubbornly all along the line. He allowed but four hits, and only one of these was allowed to materialize into a run. In the very first inning Reilly tripled and counted on a sacrifice fly to left out. From then on the locals could do nothing with his shoots.

The Crackers counted in the first round, when Lee reached first on Thomas' muff of his high fly, took second on an infield out, and came home on Sid Smith's whistling single over second. Williams singled, and stole second to count on a single by Rumler for the second run by the Crackers. Potts got on in the fifth, when Bluhm dropped Reilly's throw; Hiett singled, Lee scored Potts with a single over third, and Heitt counted on a high heave to first by Thomas on Williams' grounder.

The Crackers showed steady improvement in the series with the Pelicans. They were easy victims in the first game with Dent pitching. The second game was lost after a hard struggle. Allen and Hiett won their games with comparative ease, making an even break on the series.

The competition was over 72 holes at medal play, 36 being played Saturday and 36 yesterday. Hagen's total score was 298. He broke all records for the course Saturday with 140, and continued his good golf yesterday with 146.

Mercer Team On Long Trip

MACON, May 3.—The Mercer baseball team begins today the first of three series of games with Tennessee colleges, which will fill the entire week. The teams play Sewanee this afternoon, having two games scheduled with the Tigers. Wednesday and Thursday they play Vanderbilt in Nashville, and Friday and Saturday they battle the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. Coach Robins announced before the team left that he expected to get better than an even break on the trip.

The Sportlight

BY GRANTLAND RICE

"Old King Cole was a merry old soul—
A merry old soul was he"—
But he never was caught in a hard, close match
Where he sliced one back of a tree;
And he never came up to a mashie shot
And swung for a lusty rap,
As he lifted his eye from the ball and topped Thedamthingintootrap.

"How," queries a frothing fanatic, "do you pronounce Kauff?" The "u" is elastic—as in j-u-m-p.

As owner Robert B. Ward observed Benny Kauff rising lightly for a flying jump from Brooklyn to New York he is said to have rushed a cordon of guards around his bakery before that too was enticed out of his eager reach.

At the same moment Mr. Ward is said to have admitted that he made a clerical error or a tactical blunder when he figured any philanthropy into his baseball debut and believed that he was eradicating serfdom from the pastime.

DUCKING THE SPOTLIGHT.

Hereafter Rube Marquard should refrain from establishing any extraordinary stuff. Three years ago he won 19 straight and then was hammered to a pulp the rest of the year; last season he won a 21 inning battle and was then toppled 12 times in a row. This spring he opened with a no-hit affair and has been thrown to the lions ever since.

If the Rube breaks or ties another record he is liable to have his bean carried away with a drive through the box.

A PAIR OF COLLAPSES.

When the Red Sox were picked to canter in with the American League pennant they were figured to have the stoutest pitching staff in baseball. They had no winning edge on the rest of the league in other ways. So far this pitching staff has fluttered badly, and Hood and Gregg remain useless, as the case now looks, the Red Sox margin will be wiped away and the race will turn into a free-for-all, pay-as-you-enter, catch-as-catch-can, anybody's pennant.

In fact, the virile Dope has been so badly shot up at this writing that it is difficult to tell what happened yesterday, much less what might happen tomorrow or next month.

The second pitching collapse has been even more startling than the first. McGraw figured that with Tesreau, Matthewson, Marquard and Perritt he at least had a well experienced, steady staff.

Yet there has never been a time since he took up the Giant case, some 12 or 13 years ago, when the first dozen games have furnished such moth-eaten pitching.

QUICK RETURNS.

No entry ever finished first by playing it safe in a field of class.

There are times when one can't always tell, but as a general rule he can make a fairly certain guess.

ADD POPULAR SONGS.

"I wonder if they'll miss me."—By Benny Kauff.
"I don't know where I'm going, but I'm on my way."—Patrick Moran.

AS THE CASE NOW STANDS.

If one had to make a survey of what has happened so far in the National League and offer a guess based upon form and stuff shown to date, the National League flag fight would be a matter of Braves vs. Phillies, with the Braves having the edge.

So far Giants, Dodgers, Cubs, Reds and Pirates have failed to show any pennant power or consistency. But the Phillies have been playing the best ball in either circuit, and the Braves, while still meandering along, have managed to stay around, with their pitching staff still backward.

In the course of a short while Stallings will have Evers back in, with Rudolph, James and Tyler ready to work at top speed. When this happens, with the batting power added by Sherwood Magee, it will be hard to hold the Braves in check.

They are not hustling as they did last August and September. But if they are crowded after the next two weeks there will be a return of the old fire and fuzz. They have already shown they have a much harder attack to repel than they had a year ago, and this, with the pitching they can soon bank on, will leave them even keener favorites than they were back in March before the first gun was fired.

The Phillies, being under a new regime, may refuse to break and scatter as they have done before—but this is peering a trifle too far ahead to be listed among the authentic incidents of the dope.

Crackers Open Long Home Stay

Molesworth's Barons Here to Meet Locals in Four Games at Ponce de Leon

After a brief visit of four days with the Pelicans, the Crackers return home today to inaugurate one of the longest home stays of the season. The bunch will be here continuously through May 25, when they leave to open with the Lookouts in Chattanooga on their first invasion of the northern division. In the meantime, they meet the Barons, the Lookouts, the Chicks, the Travelers and the Vols at Ponce de Leon.

The trip just finished ended with results as satisfactory as could have been asked. An even break in four games with the Pelicans in New Orleans is a good record. Furthermore one of the two lost was dropped after a game uphill fight, which showed that the boys were working right on up to the finish. The first game was lost because of the fact that the Pels murdered Ed Dent's hurling in cold blood, and with Bagby traveling at top speed, the issue was never in doubt after the first three innings.

Today's game marks the first visit of the Barons to Ponce de Leon. Manager Molesworth is bringing along an extensively revamped organization from that which won the pennant for Shantown last season. Charlie Carroll, Roy Ellam, Omar Hardgrove, Dave Roth, Dick Robertson, and Clyde Melride were regular last season, and Danny Clark and Catcher Wallace were with the outfit a part of last season, but were hardly considered as regulars.

The Baron chieftain has in his outfit two other players who are well known to local fans in Edison Hemingway at third and Yale Sloan in the outfield. This pair played with Nashville last year, Sloan having spent the 1913 season in this league also as a member of the Montgomery Billikens. Jimmy Magee is playing the other outfield position, while Danny Clark is working at second.

Manager Smith will doubtless pitch either Manning or Browning in the opener, while Manager Molesworth is expected to use either Hardgrove or Johnson.

The game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

Following is the probable line-up:

ATLANTA.	BIRMINGHAM
Lee, lf.	Magee, cf.
Williams, 2b.	Hemingway, 3b.
Smith, c.	Clark, 2b.
Rumler, rf.	Sloan, lf.
Moran cf.	McBride, rf.
Bisland, ss.	Carroll, 1b.
Eibel, 1b.	Ellam, ss.
Potts, 3b.	Wallace, c.
Browning or	Hardgrove or
Manning, p.	Johnson, p.

Then began the brace. Starting against the Gulls at Ponce de Leon three were bagged in a row, and then the journey to New Orleans just ended was begun. There are several causes for this improvement. With an old steady head like Bid Smith back of the plate, the pitchers have settled down to a better brand of pitching. Also Smith has been working in a timely manner, and his lead has been followed by others.

Rumler, Smith and Lee have been doing some clever hitting, while Roy Moran has been following up in good style. In two of the Pelicans games, Captain Bisland was facing the ball after a fashion that would indicate a return to the batting form displayed in the great race of 1913, when he found up the season with a mark better than .300. Williams and Potts have not been hitting heavily, but their hits have as a rule been delivered at times when they did real service. Eibel is yet far below his regular batting stride, but it is believed he will get going before much longer.

A revival of stickwork and steadiness in the box have been important factors in the brace taken by the team. But there are still other factors. Chief among these is a fighting spirit. In nearly every game won lately the team has come from behind. Even of the second game in New Orleans which was lost, the boys kept fighting right up until the last man was down in the ninth, and they fell just one short of tying the count in that last frame.

This spirit was sadly lacking in the first few games, and whoever or whatever is responsible for it, is due a big chunk of credit. A ball team without fight is a long-shot entry, regardless of its class. More mediocre teams with plenty of hustle and pep have come through with flying colors than have fast fielding, good hitting outfits minus the element. It adds up ten to one and better. Keep after 'em, gang, keep after 'em, that's what counts more than anything else.

Hirst to Meet Eddie Hanlon

Three bouts over a ten-round route will be offered in a boxing card arranged by Mike Saul to be staged at the Columbia theater on Central avenue Friday night of this week. The main bout will bring together Roy Hirst and Eddie Hanlon. Hanlon is well known here, while Hirst won a decision in ten rounds over Terry Nelson at a private bout here a short time since.

The other bouts will bring together Battling Budd and Kid Underwood and Kid Younz and Willie Howard. Budd, Underwood and Young are all well known here, while Howard, a tough youngster from New York, is said to be able to take care of himself with any boy around 128 pounds. To judge from the past records of these boys, lively, active milling may be expected in each bout. None of these boys lay any claim to championship caliber, but for that matter, champions and near champions have as a rule failed to draw the approval of local fans. Local ring fans want action and plenty of it, and these matches ought to provide such.

Prices for the show will range from 50 cents to $1.

Otto Jordan to Pilot Valdosta

Former Second Baseman and Manager of the Crackers Succeeds Guy Sample With State Leaguers

Otto Jordan, former second baseman and manager of the Crackers, announced this morning that he had signed a contract to manage and play second base for the Valdosta club in the Georgia State league. He leaves tonight to take charge of the club.

The management of the Valdosta club has made a wise move in connecting up with Otto to handle the team. No man in the game knows the inside and outside features of the pastime any better than he does. Furthermore, there are few infielders in the minor leagues who have anything on him in handling chances in his territory. Lightning was the sole reason for his being let out of this league. He states that during the last two years he has hit better than for several seasons, and his playing in all departments should prove a big help to the Valdosta club.

Jordan replaces Guy Sample, who had had charge of the club since the men reported for practice. The team has not been going very well, and a change in management was deemed the best move. If the club has any good material, Jordan should bring the bunch along to a contending position in the race within a short time.

Benny Kauff's leap set no record for distance, the hurdle across Brooklyn bridge being short compared to the jumps some of the human frogs have made, but Benny must have attained some height, judging from the muss which his stunt is stirring up.

LIQUIDATION AND BEAR PRESSURE CAUSE DECLINE

Market in New York Closed 17 to 20 Points Down From Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—There was a renewal of Saturday's selling movement at the opening of the cotton market today and first prices were easy at a decline of 10 to 13 points. Later prices practically met the local break of last week and there was heavy selling here by Wall street and Southern houses which was supposed to represent continued liquidation. An unfavorable view of international politics probably contributed to the selling movement and some of the bears who study weather conditions were predicting a break in the eastern belt even although the official forecast was for fair weather except for probable showers in north Carolina. Offerings were fairly well absorbed around the opening figures, however, by covering and fluctuations during the early trading were less irregular, with Liverpool buyers among the buyers.

There was good demand on the early break below 10.40 for October and prices rallied later in the morning with that position selling back Saturday's closing figures on covering and some fresh buying. Detailed weather reports showed light scattering showers in some sections of the eastern belt, but there were complaints that further rains were needed both in eastern and central sections.

Notwithstanding the large exports, the market weakened again during the afternoon under Wall street and wire house liquidation, while some of the local spot brokers were credited with selling on the bulges which carried prices back to practically the low point of opening.

More Money Spent on Golf Than on Baseball

In the May American Magazine Jerome D. Travers, four times amateur golf champion of America, writes a remarkably interesting article entitled, "The Business of Golfing," in which he reveals many startling facts about golf and the game. After demonstrating that the average golfer spends about $120 a year for golf, Mr. Travers goes on in part as follows:

"The average cost of $120 doesn't mean much to the man who can afford it, when considered alone. But when this cost is multiplied by all those playing golf in the United States and then that sum added to the vast wakes to the enormous amount of money spent upon the game—far more than is spent upon any other sport in the nation.

"This may sound like a joke to a good many before money spent on golf than upon baseball, but all these high-priced professionals and all these big stadiums? Yes, and more.

"So far as the listed number of organizations is concerned, there are 1,300 clubs now in the United States. These clubs have a playing, or at least an active playing, list of 350,000 names.

"Figured then on the basis of 350,000 golfers at the average cost summed up of $120 a year, the total amount spent on golf each season runs up to $42,000,000, and this exclusive of the $200,000 paid in for initiation fees!

"This seems to be an incredible amount of money to be paid out for one sport, among many others, but if further considered that the average golfer is not the average golfer and the purchased buoys of the Nineteenth Hole, the sum easily exceeds $50,000,000 each year.

"Of this amount the largest individual item is in dues, which amount to something like $17,500,000 annually."

General Selling Movement Caused Loss of From 2 to 7 Points in Leaders

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—Latest war news in its possible relation to this country formed the basis of a general selling movement in the opening of today's market. Instead of the violent gains which have been the chief characteristic of each new week, there were losers of from 2 to 5 points mainly in equipment and industrial shares. Westinghouse fell 5¼ to 98½, Bethlehem Steel and General Electric 3 and other war specialties as well as motors, almost as much. Coppers yielded more moderately. Canadian Pacific was the weakest railway issue, declining 3 points, with 1 point decline in Reading, Union Pacific and Northern Pacific.

The market registered its third decline of the season in the early afternoon when the entire list fell lower than before. War specialties showed loss of 5 to almost 10 points from Saturday's close on heavy selling.

Bonds were irregular.

Lowest prices rulled in the last hour, steel falling 3 points under its most quotation, with proportionate decline elsewhere.

The closing was heavy.

CAPTAIN WM. S. BENSON IS NATIVE OF GEORGIA

New Chief of Naval Operations Spent His Boyhood in This State

In the appintment of Captain William Shepherd Benson to the position created by the last congress of chief of naval operations, Atlanta in common with the rest of the state, has a subject for congratulation: for Captain Benson is a Georgian.

He was born in Georgia, where his boyhood was passed in the stormy era that marked the close of the Civil war. He was ten years old when the war ended, and seventeen when he was appointed to the naval academy as midshipman from this state. He entered Annapolis in 1872 and was graduated in 1877.

Since then he has served as junior officer on the old Hartford; on the Essex; on the Constitution as a last cruise; in the Brooklyn navy yard; on the Alliance and the Yantic, on the latter of which he took part in the famous expedition to rescue Greely, the polar explorer. On board the Dolphin in 1888 he made his first voyage around the world, and in 1901 he was named commandant of midshipmen at Annapolis, which position he held when he received his new appointment last week.

As chief of naval operations Captain Benson will be second only in importance to the active head of the navy department and his duty will be to advise the secretary of the navy in all matters pertaining to the efficiency of the various fleets and shore stations.

OSBORNE WILL TESTIFY AGAINST GIRL ACCUSER

New York Lawyer Will Seek to Prove He Never Courted Rae Tanzer

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 3.—Franklin D. Safford, on trial charged with perjury as a result of his identification of James W. Osborne as the man who visited a hotel in Plainfield, N. J., with Miss Rae Tanger last October, was ready to resume testimony in his own defense in the federal court today. After Ruth and Rose Tanzer have testified for the defense, the prosecution expects to call several witnesses in rebuttal to tell of the whereabouts of Mr. Osborne at the times Rae Tanzer alleged he was in her company.

Mr. Osborne, it was stated today, will be one of the first rebuttal witnesses. The prosecution, it was understood, will attempt to show that on six of the days when Miss Tanzer said she saw him in New York he was in Providence, R. I., trying a case before a court.

Hotel Clerk Believes J. W. Osborne Is the Man

NEW YORK, May 3.—Frank D. Safford, the aged hotel clerk on trial on a perjury charge in connection with his identification of James W. Osborne, a well-known criminal lawyer, as the man registered with Miss Rae Tanzer at a Plainfield, N. J., hotel last October, reiterated that identification on the stand today.

"I have looked at Mr. Osborne in court here, and the more I have looked at him the more I am convinced that he is the man," said the witness. "I did not see it for nay, and I have not committed any perjury."

BUILD ON THIS BASIS!

BEFORE you start building by "DAY WORK" bring your plans to us—or let our architectural department submit drawings. We will then make an estimate on what the building should cost. Our Purchasing Department will buy, after securing the material at the lowest cost, and our well-organized force of capable workmen will be at your service. All the money saved by our system will be yours, and our fee will be a small percentage on the net cost. This basis is really better than it sounds. Of course we also do building on straight contract—at low prices.
